Bringing Out Body of Slayer and Suicide in School Tragedy

Snapshot by Boston American staff photographer showing undertakers bringing out body of Miss Weed, who to-day killed her associate in exclusive girls' school and then killed herself.

MURDER AND SUICIDE OF WOMEN PRINCIPALS IN SCHOOL

Miss Hardee of Laurens Preparatory School in Back Bay Slain by Her Co-Principal, Miss Weed, Who Ended Own Life.

Miss Sarah Chamberlain Weed, who fled from a West Newton sanitarium yesterday, shot and killed her bosom friend and business associate, Miss Elizabeth Bailey Hardee, and then turned the fatal revolver and killed herself at an early hour to-day at the Laurens School, one of the most exclusive educational institutions in the country. The women were both Wellesley graduates and well-known teachers.

This shocking tragedy occurred in a four-story brick building at No. 107 Audubon road, corner of Jersey street, near the Brookline line, at about 6:30 o'clock. Twenty-one wealthy girls, mostly from the West and South, were peacefully sleeping when the deadly shots rang out. These young women are daughters of millionaire parents and members of exclusive social sets in the communities where they lived. Admission to the Laurens School was in itself a guarantee of social prestige.

GIRLS IN PANIC OVER TRAGEDY.

Confusion and horror reigned in the house when it became known that Miss Hardee, the principal of the school, and Miss Weed, assistant principal, had died of violence.

When the police arrived they found the girls students, who were preparing for Wellesley and Simmons colleges, verging on hysteria. They were either in tears or wildly excited. Many of them have already left home and others are going. It is believed that by to-night the school will be deserted by all except servants.

The police believe that Miss Weed, whose mind had become impaired by overwork, if not by financial worry, got up out of the bed where she and Miss Hardee had been lying for about three hours and stealthily going to the place where she had concealed a revolver, returned to the bedside and shot Miss Hardee in the back of the head. Then, it is believed, Miss Weed crept back into bed and, placing the muzzle of the pistol at her right temple, fired the shot that ended her own life. Both women died instantly, physicians think.

Miss Catherine B. Lange, housekeeper at the school, was on her way to Miss Hardee's room when she heard two shots. By the time the door was forced and she reached the bedside both women were breathing their last if not already dead, as is thought by Dr. George Stedman, assistant medical examiner.

Miss Page called Miss Hardee and Miss Weeds at 6:30 o'clock for an early breakfast. The two latter women were to take the 7:05 train for West Newton, where Miss Weede was to return to the sanitarium conducted by Dr. Julia M. Dutton, at No. 3,350 Otis street. After talking with Miss Hardee for a moment Miss Page went to the upper floor to arouse a servant. It was when she was coming downstairs she heard the shots.

Miss Weede's family home is at No. 112 West Willow Grove avenue, Chestnut Hill, Philadelphia, while Miss Hardee resided before coming to Boston at No. 214 Garnett street, East Savannah, Ga.

Dr. George Stedman, assistant medical examiner of Suffolk county, who examined the bodies, stated that it was a case of murder and suicide.

Both women were refined, cultured and of high rank as pedagogicalists. They had been friends for years and established the Laurens School in October last. Miss Weed was thirty-seven and Miss Hardee was thirty-five years old.

They both were taken to Briggs's undertaking establishment on Howard street, where twenty-two girls in the Laurens School, which occupies a four-story brick building, The students range in age from eighteen to twenty-five years. Miss Weed and Miss Hardee had known each other for years and had been teachers in preparatory schools in the Newtons for a long period before they decided to establish the institution where they died a violent death.

They had limited resources and soon after the school opened it was evident that worry over financial affairs and hard work was impairing Miss Weede's mind. She went to Dr. Norton's sanitarium in Norwood and escaped from there once and was missing for several days. Then she went to Dr. Dutton's sanitarium in West Newton and remained a patient there until late yesterday, when she decided to leave.

She arrived at the Laurens School about 6 o'clock. When it was established Miss Hardee was principal and Miss Weede was assistant principal. This business arrangement ostensibly remained during Miss Weed's absence at feath instruction. She was somewhat nervous when she reached the Laurens School, but did or said nothing indicating homicidal intent.

TRIED TO CALL DOCTOR.

After talking a little while with her associate, Miss Hardee stepped out of the room and tried to get into telephonic communication with Dr. Dutton's sanitarium. But the line was busy at the time, and not wishing to leave Miss Weed alone for any length of time, Miss Hardee decided to keep the deranged woman at the house over night.

Dr. Eliot P. Joslin of No. 81 Bay State road was the first physician summoned, and when he arrived he made a brief examination of the bodies. He expressed the belief that wrath had been instantaneous.

Dr. Stedman said regarding the tragedy: "Miss Hardee was shot in the back of the head and Miss Weed in the right temple. Blood from the wounds had saturated the pillows, and it is most probable that both women died immediately."

It is said that the revolver, a thirty-two calibre, was found lying on Miss Weede's breast. Another report is that she was holding it in a fleccy cloud when the bodies were found.

Dr. M. S. Warren of No. 259 Beacon street was also another Back Bay physician called to the house after the tragedy became known.

Sergeant Goode and three policemen from the Brookline police station house were sent to the Laurens school as soon as the tragedy was reported to the police.

Among those in the house who slept there last night were Grace McDonald, janitor; Martha Ferris, Stella Black, Mary Sweeney, Clara Mercer and Mary Maud Farrell, servants. No attache of the house is permitted to say a word relative to the case. They are acting under orders.

IN NERVOUS CONDITION.

When Miss Weed reached the Laurens School she was in a highly nervous condition, but was much calmer when Miss Page took her to a bedroom on the second floor. It was then after 6 o'clock, and the house remained quiet for awhile, or until Miss Page heard Miss Weed walking the room. She was in such a disturbed mental condition that Miss Page decided Miss Hardee and the latter decided that Miss Weed would be better if she went to her room. This was about 6 o'clock. The women evidently rested peacefully for the rest of the night, for Miss Weed did not appear in a distracted mood when Miss Page went to call them at 6:30.

The police believed that the homicidal mania attacked Miss Weede in a moment. Although it is admitted that she might have been brooding over the crime all night. So far as can be learned she did not wish to return to Dr. Dutton's sanitarium and her aberration might have inspired the thought that Miss Hardee was an enemy.

ROOSEVELT RELENTS IN BROWNSVILLE CASE

WASHINGTON, March 11.—The President to-day sent a letter to the Senate suggesting the passage of a law which will allow discharged negro soldiers of the Twenty-fifth United States Infantry to reenlist in the army, if they produce satisfactory evidence that they were not concerned in the Brownsville raid.

After an exhaustive inquiry of over a year, the military affairs committee of the Senate also to-day formally reported on this raid.

Three reports were submitted, one by Chairman Warren, on behalf of the committee, in which the Democratic members joined, and which, in the main, sustains the action of the President in dismissing the negro soldiers; a minority report, signed by Senators Scott, Foraker, Bulkeley and Hemenway, and a separate report signed by Foraker and Bulkeley alone, which completely vindicates the soldiers of charges made against them, and recommending legislation for the restoration to them of all the rights of which they have been deprived.

The Foraker-Bulkeley report draws these conclusions:

That the testimony wholly fails to identify the particular individual; that the testimony wholly fails to show that the discharged soldiers entered into any agreement or so-called "conspiracy of silence"; that the testimony is contradictory and much of it incredible, and that the weight of the testimony shows that none of the soldiers of the Twenty-fifth participated in the shooting.

The two Senators then made the following recommendation:

"Whereas, the testimony shows that the discharged men had a good record as soldiers, and that many of them had by their long and faithful service acquired valuable rights, of which they are deprived by discharge without honor, and, whereas, the testimony shows beyond a reasonable doubt that whatever may be the fact as to who did the shooting, many of the men so discharged were innocent of any offense in connection therewith, therefore, be it, in our opinion, the duty of Congress to provide by appropriate legislation for the correction of their records, for their re-enlistment and reinstatement in the army, and for the restoration to them of all the rights of which they have been deprived, until we do so recommend."

PETITION IN BANKRUPTCY AGAINST KING

An involuntary petition in bankruptcy against C. King, tar dealer and New York financial agent, was filed to-day with the clerk of the United States District Court.

There are four petitioners, and each claims that they never received anything in return for money sent to King for stocks.

The four creditors are John G. McCarthy, Boston; Mary L. Davis, Boston; David A. Smart, Providence; Robert O. Cochran, Natick.

McCarthy claims $2,000 for money invested in Union Pacific and Copper Range. Mrs. Davis purchased six shares of Sugar for $488. Smart paid $514 for a $500 gold bond on the Douglas Copper Company, and Cochran invested $1,000 in American Woolen and Ekrman.

The creditors claim that by assigning to Henry D. Yeaton and Stephen A. Hopkins, King committed an act of bankruptcy.

Reject New Haven Piece Work System

STRIKE VOTE TONIGHT

Leaders of Brotherhood of Car Workers See Hope of Compromise.

NEW HAVEN, Ct., March 11.—An overwhelming sentiment for an immediate strike was expressed by the car shop workers of the New Haven system to-day, but the national officials urged delay. The car Workers' Brotherhood is largely in favor of refusing to accept the piece work system which the New Haven road has established, but national officers of both the Trainmen and Machinists' Brotherhoods, however, believe that a compromise can be reached with the railroad company.

Word that all the car shops in the vicinity of Boston have voted to strike reached here to-day and added to the impulse to order a strike immediately. A mass meeting has been ordered of the car workers and the allied members of their brotherhood to-night when a decisive vote will probably be taken.

The action of the New Haven road in retracting, till Thursday, the order for the piece work system to go into effect, indicates to leaders of the workmen that the road would accept an offer of the National Brotherhood for a compromise.

INTERSTATE BOARD MAY AVERT STRIKE ON THE NEW HAVEN

The Interstate Commerce Commission has been requested to act as peacemaker in the controversy between the New Haven Railroad officials and its employes over the introduction of the piece work pay system, in order to avert the threatened strike of 10,000 car workers, which would tie up every shop on the system and paralyze traffic.

Before leaving Boston last night to attend the conference held at 2 o'clock to-day in New Haven, with the company's representatives, high officials of the International Association of Carmen stated to a BOSTON AMERICAN reporter that they expected an amicable settlement.

"A secret conference, held in Boston to-day," said one of the chiefs, "leads us to believe that the trouble is already practically adjusted. The international officers have been in secret correspondence with the Interstate Commerce Commission, and I think that pressure will be brought to bear upon the company to revoke the piece work order."

The official would not say as much, but he intimated that some one representing the Commerce Board had taken up the situation with the international officers at this conference.

The order relating to piece work went into force to-day.

Prouty Coming to Boston.

Inquiry at the leading hotels in this city to-day failed to reveal the presence here of any of the Interstate Commerce Commissioners. At the Hotel Somerset, however, a mail addressed to Charles S. Prouty, the message from Vermont. This leads to the belief that Mr. Prouty may have met the labor leaders.

The other commissioners are: Martin A. Knapp of New York, chairman; E. E. Clark of Iowa, J. S. Harlan of Illinois, Judson C. Clement of Georgia, Francis M. Cockrell of Missouri and F. W. Lane of California.

The New Haven order extending the piece work and bonus system to the car shops is considered by the employes as a direct effort to kill the unions. They assert that they believe the Government will not overlook such action by a railroad engaged in interstate commerce.

"Rather than submit to this plan," said J. H. Dahlgren, a member of the Executive Board of the International Association of Machinists, "we will tie up the whole New Haven system. Yet we feel that the company will use us fairly when we state our position to-day."

An indication that the union leaders fear the installation of the piece work plan on the Boston & Maine system, also, is forded by the fact that Timothy Connors, who heads the machinists on that railroad, accompanied the New Haven men to New Haven last night.

Will Not Allow Piece Work.

"There will be no piece work day on the Boston & Maine system, if we have to do every railroad in New England," he said to an AMERICAN reporter on the train. "And you can't shake that too strong. I have never done much talking to the press, but it's time to talk now. I won't say what I'm going to New Haven for, but it is not for the fun of it."

Several of the international officers of the various crafts left Boston yesterday at noon. Others left at 8 o'clock and at midnight. In New Haven they were greeted by James O'Connell, of Washington, president of the machinists; George H. Dunn, of Kansas City, head of the boilermakers, and J. W. Kline, of Cleveland, president of the blacksmiths.

The other leaders at to-day's conference include: Thomas Wilson, fourth vice-president of the machinists; M. F. Ryan, first vice-grand chief of the International Association of Car Workers; J. W. Dahlgren, past president of District No. 43, Machinists; W. J. O'Hara, vice-president of District No. 43; A. D. Armour, of the machinists' executive board, and Edward M. Callin, president of local union, No. 1298, Machinists' Helpers.

President Charles S. Mellen of the New Haven has signified his intention of meeting the union officials at the company's offices. General Manager Higgins was promulgated the piecework order, will also be present.

450 PUPILS IN WEST END FACE DEATH PERIL

Means of Egress at the Baldwin School Blocked by Teams in Narrow Alley.

TWO DOORS OPEN INWARD

The Baldwin Primary School, Chardon place, off Chardon street, West End, which Superintendent Stratton D. Brooks has condemned and said should be torn down, has the worst facilities for escape of any school building in Boston. Here are some of the objections:

A fire escape at the foot of which is a locked iron gate.

There are five stairway exits, but the doors of two of these in the rear open inward.

These two rear passages are so narrow that two children could hardly squeeze out together.

The five exits from the school which the 450 pupils must use lead from the school yard to a narrow alley, which during school hours is crowded with wagons.

Calls It Fire Trap.

"Our school is a bad firetrap so far as exits are concerned," declares Principal Josephine F. Joyce.

While the school is equipped with modern fire-escapes, all the doors of the building lead to the school yard, from which the only manner of egress is through the narrow, dark Chardon place, which during school hours is crowded with teams.

In case of fire, if the pupils should get out of the school safely they would be in great danger of trampling on one another while trying to crowd their way through the spider web of teams.

Despite the fact that a city ordinance gives school children the right of way while going to and returning from school, day after day for the last twenty years Chardon place has been crowded from early in the morning till late afternoon with teams.

While going to and from school the pupils on the second and third floors use the fire escapes in order to know how to use them in case of fire.

Doors Open Inward.

Two doors in the basement, which lead into the school yard open inward, despite the fact that there is an order prohibiting the doors of any Boston schoolhouse opening in this manner. The school, which is in the very heart of the business district of the West End, is surrounded by a brick wall fifteen feet high. There are two gates which lead from the yard, one to Chardon place and one to the Hawkins street school yard. The gate which leads to Chardon place is fairly wide, but the other leading to the wood yard is so narrow that it would not permit more than one pupil to pass through at a time.

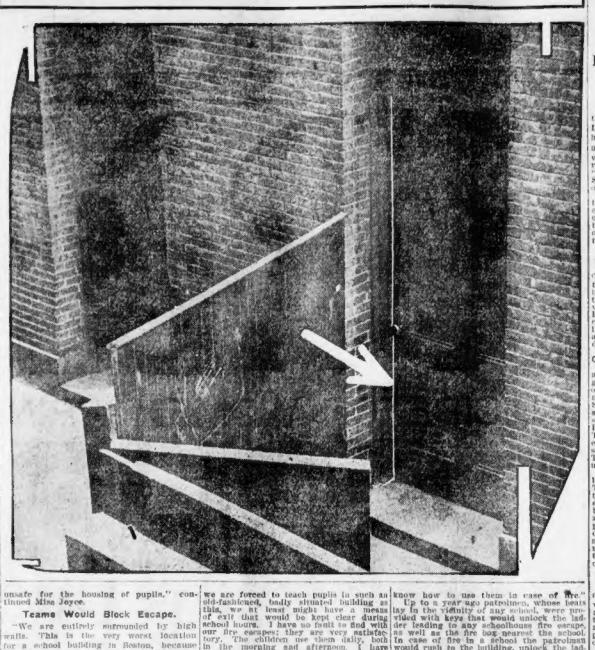
"Yes, our school is a bad fire trap, as far as exits are concerned," declared Principal Josephine F. Joyce of the Baldwin primary school to a BOSTON AMERICAN reporter, after she had made a tour of inspection of the building with him. "This is the school which Superintendent of Schools Stratton D. Brooks declared to be unsafe for the housing of pupils," continued Miss Joyce.

Teams Would Block Escape.

"We are entirely surrounded by high walls. This is the very worst location for a school building in Boston, because the only safe means of exit, Chardon place, is filled with teams all day. If fire should break out in this building I believe that the pupils would get down stairs safely, but then they would be jammed into a mere cul de sac, which the police permit to remain in the small narrow passageway all day. It is an outrage and a downright shame for the authorities to jeopardize the lives of the little children in the way I do. Day after day I have made complaints, but the teams remain.

"Something must be done at once. If we are forced to teach pupils in such an old-fashioned, badly situated building as this, we at least might have a means of exit that would be kept clear during school hours. I have no fault to find with our fire escapes; they are very satisfactory. The children use them daily, both in the morning and afternoon. I have them do this in order that they may become acquainted with fire escapes and know how to use them in case of fire."

Up to a year ago patrolmen, whose beats lay in the vicinity of the school, were provided with keys that would unlock the iron gate leading to the schoolhouse fire escape, as well as the fire box nearest the school, in case of fire in a school the patrolman would rush to the building, unlock the ladder and then push in an alarm. About a year ago all of the keys were called in.



DOORS OF THIS SCHOOL OPEN INWARD.

Photograph shows narrow and dangerous doorways at the Baldwin Primary School Building, Chardon place, West End. Both doors open inward and are only wide enough to barely permit two children to pass abreast.

MORSE HELD IN $30,000 ON CONSPIRACY CHARGE

ICE KING ARRAIGNED WITH CURTIS IN BANK OF NORTH AMERICA CASE.

NEW YORK, March 11.—Charles W. Morse and Alfred H. Curtis, vice-president of the Bank of North America, were arraigned in the Federal Court to-day before Judge Hough under a joint indictment returned yesterday charging them with conspiracy to defraud and conspiracy to enter fraudulent entries.

There are twenty-nine counts in the indictment against the two men. Both pleaded not guilty, and Morse was held in $30,000 bail, while $10,000 was furnished by Curtis.

Judge Hough gave the attorneys for the defendants until March 20 in which to file any plea or enter a demurrer.

The indictments grew out of Morse and Curtis's connection with the National Bank of North America.

BOARD SEEKS TO AVERT BIG STRIKE

2,000 men, are closed to-day because of the four-day schedule. Unless the company backs down completely to-day or asks further time for consideration, the 10,000 men employed at all the shops on the system will probably be called out on strike before to-morrow morning.

Reports are in circulation that the New Haven has been preparing for a strike by altering freight cars at Readville, a house non-union men. This rumor started through the fitting of screen doors and lockers in two remodelled freight cars. These are used by trainmen who are compelled to stay in Readville over night. At Readville to-day all the great army of employes are expecting to be called out before they report for work again. They are unanimous in determining to resist the attempt to change that they would get three months in the year, and that some of the men would be given a furlough.

They also assert that they are willing to accept reductions in pay under the present system and point to the four-day time schedule now under which their wages run over 35 to 50 per cent. They say that they can live on the present wages, which is opposed to all union principles.

WIN POINT IN FIGHT FOR FREE "L" TRANSFERS

Deciding in favor of citizens of Cambridge who desire free transfers to the Boston Elevated at Cottage Farm, the Board of Railroad Commissioners, having no mandatory powers, to-day made the following recommendation:

That a free transfer point be established at the corner of Essex street and Commonwealth avenue, Boston, for passengers from Cambridge via Brookline street bridge cars to west bound Commonwealth avenue cars, and from east-bound Commonwealth avenue cars to northbound Brookline street bridge cars.

Residents on or in the vicinity of Pearl and Brookline streets, Cambridge, had been given a free-cent fare, to ride West on Commonwealth avenue, Boston, and return, with free transfer privileges at Brookline street and Massachusetts avenue, Cambridge, and at Beacon street and Massachusetts avenue, Boston.

In order to avoid themselves of the five-cent fare, however, these Cantabrigians were obliged to travel on this route and no other. The company operates a line of cars over Pearl and Brookline streets, making a through run to Park street subway, Boston, via Brookline street bridge and Commonwealth avenue and return.

The petitioners contended that the- are outside of the zone entitled to transfers on this route. The transfer point at Commonwealth avenue and Essex street, recommended by the Railroad Commission, was suggested by the petitioners.

TAFT MEN BEATEN IN FIGHT FOR DELEGATES

FILING OF "UNPLEDGED" PAPERS POINTS TO CRANE VICTORY IN BOSTON.

The filing of nominations of delegates to the State and Ninth, Tenth and Eleventh District Republican conventions at the headquarters of the Republican City Committee to-day indicates a sweeping Boston victory for United States Senator W. Murray Crane over the Taft supporters. The "organization" slate for delegates to the State and to Congressional conventions in all of the twenty-five wards are unpledged.

Not only will Boston's delegates to the three district conventions and her 230 delegates to the Republican State convention oppose any effort to pledge the delegates to the national convention, but they will oppose any attempt to pass a vote stating the preference of Massachusetts.

Delegates Unpledged.

As the Massachusetts Republican State convention has never bound its delegates by the unit rule, like their Democratic brethren, the six delegates from Boston to the national convention will go to the convention unhampered by any pledge, and Boston's representation of 230 in the State convention will prove an important factor in preventing the Taft people from passing any vote of preference or pledging the four delegates-at-large.

President Grafton of the Republican City Committee said this afternoon:

"Boston's 230 delegates will oppose any attempt to pledge the Massachusetts delegates or bind them in any way. They will oppose any such resolution whether they may be presented expressing a preference.

Senator Crane's plan is that the delegates should go to Chicago unhampered by instructions and be supported to the end by Boston's delegates in the convention. The Taft managers have no right to claim that either Secretary Herman Hormel or myself is absolutely committed to Taft. Secretary Taft may be available to-day, but three months may tell a different story."

The attitude of the Boston organization is said to be due to Assistant United States Treasurer Edwin Upton Curtis, who has taken sides with Senator Crane in the present controversy. Curtis is credited with being the "man behind" in the city organization. Senator Crane is opposed to any pledged delegates, or even to the passage of a vote of preference. Senator Lodge agrees with the junior Senator on the former proposition, but would not be adverse to a vote stating the preference of Massachusetts.

Backed by Machine.

Former Congressman Samuel L. Powers and John C. Cobb, the Taft managers, want pledged delegates. That the Boston machine is bound more closely to Crane than to Lodge can be seen from a statement made by the BOSTON AMERICAN reporter to-day by Secretary Herman Hormel of the Republican City committee:

"I do not believe in either instructed delegates or the passage of a vote stating our preference for any particular candidate. There is little love lost, however, between the State and national conventions and the man appearing to be the most available at the time of holding the latter may not be considered so at the time of holding the former. Therefore, no vote of preference would be considered by hundreds of delegates as binding for the vote of instruction. In 1896 the State convention declined its preference for Reed and the delegates felt bound to support Reed at St. Louis, though many of them arrived there there was nothing to it but McKinley."

"Massachusetts will prove a mote potent factor in the convention if the Republicans of this State send an unhampered delegation. It may be within the power of this State to name the next President, but this cannot be done if we bind our delegates in any way."

But Few Contests.

The filing of papers indicates but few contests, but one district, the eighth, has nomination papers, being filed from each ward within the first four hours for filing. Contests have been threatened in Wards 18, 19 and 22. These have not yet developed. However, there is plenty of time for the Taft people to get in their work before Saturday morning, the last hour for filing.

Presidential Edward G. Graves of the Republican City Committee will be unopposed for re-election, as will Secretary Chairman William E. White of the Ward 3 committee and Chairman W. H. Myrick, chairman of the Ward 9 committee, will fight it out for second place. The convention for this district has been called for April 8 in Masonic Hall, East Boston.

The Eleventh District Convention will be held in Wesleyan Hall on April 9, and the candidates are former Senator Charles H. Innes, the Ward 10 leader, and former Senator Frank Rotherich of Ward 22. Representative Jacob Mock of Ward 22 has been thinking of contesting with Rotherich. He has not yet, however, filed any nomination papers, as he has pledged to Rotherich from his own ward.

In the Tenth District, Secretary Herman Hormel of the Republican City Committee, who lives in Ward 14, South Boston, and Clifford Gallagher of Milton, treasurer of the Republican State Committee, are candidates, and there is a third candidate in the field in the person of former Congressman Harrison H. Atwood of Ward 24.

Two Out for Alternate.

The delegation from Atwood's own ward is pledged to Gallagher for first choice and is expected to be with Hormel for second place. Atwood, it is expected, would be content to go to Chicago as an alternate. There are, however, two candidates for alternates in the field from the district, Dr. S. S. Darling of Ward 20 and Lee M. Friedman of Ward 17. The convention will be held in Wesleyan Hall April 14.

The last hour for filing papers is 7 o'clock Friday morning. The last hour for withdrawals from delegations is 5 o'clock Monday and for substitution 5 o'clock Tuesday. The Republican State convention will be held April 10 in Tremont Temple.

HITCHCOCK'S WIFE CHEERS HIM IN COURT

Actress Bride Stands by Comedian on Trial on Charges Brought by Young Girls.

NEW YORK, March 11.—Raymond Hitchcock, the comedian, now on trial in the criminal branch of the Supreme Court on charges brought by young girls, had the consolation of his wife's presence in the courtroom to-day. Mrs. Hitchcock, who is known as Flora Zabelle on the stage, is standing loyally by her husband.

Yesterday she was ordered out of the courtroom and not permitted to be present to-day on appeal to Justice Reardon that she be permitted to sit by her husband during the trial was answered in the affirmative and she was given a seat just outside of the enclosure reserved for the lawyers, where she can see and hear all that transpires and giv Hitchcock the support of her presence. The result was that the defendant lost a great part of the nervousness that characterized him yesterday.

She was accompanied by a friend, Mrs. Duckminister, and both were dressed in the extreme of late French fashion. During the examination of talesmen Mrs. Hitchcock sent a number of hastily penciled notes to her husband, and continually smiled him encouragement in his direction.

The examination of talesmen was wearisome in the extreme, in an endeavor to keep all cranks and members and relatives of the jury, and to eliminate whoever possible through showing cause and thus saving peremptory challenges, John B. Stanchfield, for the defence, carried the questioning to the extreme, and several times was admonished by the presiding justice.

BREAKS LAW; WORKS FOR THE LORD, SHE SAYS

Woman Arrested for Distributing Circulars Makes Novel Plea in Court.

JUDGE CONTINUES CASE

"I am working for the Lord," asserted Jennie E. Thornhill of No. 584 Tremont street, when she faced Chief Justice Wilfred Bolster in the second session of the Municipal Court to-day on two charges of distributing printed circulars in the streets.

The woman is a familiar figure in Washington street, where she has spent many hours on Sundays and week days distributing religious tracts. Policeman Tayes of Station 4, who had arrested Morrison I. Swift on the same charge, and Policeman Rowell of Station 2 appeared against the woman.

"You are charged with distributing handbills in the streets. Do you plead guilty or not guilty?" Clerk Burry addressed her.

"I plead not guilty," said the woman. "It was the work of the Lord."

"Well, we want a plea of guilty or not guilty," said the clerk. "Did you distribute these circulars?"

"Yes, I distributed circulars," was the reply. "I am working for the Lord."

Judge Bolster continued the case until September 2, but he directed the policemen to arrest the woman again should she be found distributing the handbills.

BOTH USED CUTICURA AND ARE WELL AGAIN

"My husband had been a great sufferer with rheumatism for nearly fifteen years. At first it was in his bones, but later on while it was in the flesh, finally running sores broke out on his legs, from below the knees to the ankles. There are no words to tell all the discomfort and great suffering he had to endure night and day. He tried every kind of remedy and three physicians treated him, one after the other, without any good results whatever. So one day I happened to read about Cuticura Remedies, and asked him if he would not try them. 'No,' said he, 'it's no use, I've spent enough money for that kind of stuff.' I ordered five dollars' worth of Cuticura Soap, Cuticura Ointment, and Cuticura Resolvent. He began to use them without confidence but after three weeks all the sores began to heal and the burning fire stopped, and the pains became less and after about two months he was quite well. Two years later the pains and sores came back after he had been working hard and had taken cold. But as soon as he used Cuticura again it cured him. Two years ago I used Cuticura Pills for general debility. They did me a great deal of good and made me well. Three months since I had pains in my back and Cuticura took them away, too. I can prove this testimonial at any time. Mrs. F. V. Alberti, Upper Frenchville, Me., July 21, 1907."

Evelyn Thaw, Suing to Annul Marriage, Tells of Quarrels

PAPERS SERVED ON HUSBAND IN MATTEAWAN AND UPON HIS MOTHER AS CO-DEFENDANT.

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, March 11.—The papers in the suit of Evelyn Nesbit Thaw against her husband, Harry, for an annulment of the marriage were served on him at Matteawan Asylum for the insane to-day. At the same time a complaint was handed to the defendant's mother, Mrs. Mary Copley Thaw, she being made a co-defendant because of the possibility that the courts of New York will appoint her guardian of his estate.

The young woman sets forth that Harry K. Thaw was insane at the time the ceremony was performed and gives as proof the peculiar letters and strangely worded will which he sent to his then personal counsel, Henry W. Longfellow.

The causes, however, which led to the estrangement date back from the night of the Madison Square roof tragedy, when Thaw shot down and instantly killed Stanford White.

Made Martyr of Herself.

The complaint sets forth that the manner in which the Pittsburg millionaire wreaked summary vengeance on the architect caused the young woman's feelings toward him to change.

She knew at the time that his family were opposed to her, but in the face of the circumstances she resigned herself to him and made a martyr of herself when she took the witness stand and told the sensational story of her New York career.

Dissension then arose between the couple, even during the first trial. Harry's mother and she continually quarrelled, and although she felt little in her heart for her husband, she acted as she did simply for appearance sake. She was, in reality, a wonderful actress in court and deep down in her own feelings not the sufferer which the public made her out to be.

Struck by Thaw in Tombs.

Once she quarrelled with the Countess of Yarmouth, the prisoner's sister, and although she lent her presence in court every day, it was not with the feeling of willingness generally presumed at the time.

Long ere the first trial had been concluded the elder Mrs. Thaw determined on a divorce or an annulment. She did not care to have her son mate the initial more, for in view of the fact that Evelyn had acted the martyr, the mother deemed it a duty to let her appear in the light of the wronged plaintiff.

After the first trial the relations between the couple were even more strained than ever. Upon the occasional visits of Evelyn to the Tombs he fought with her. Once in a frenzy he struck at her through the bars of his cell and shattered some of the fibres of his right hand.

Now Willing to Forgive!

The two then knew that their married life was practically at an end, and when the second trial was finished and Thaw was sent to Matteawan she immediately set about to secure her annulment, only biding her time to let the sensation of the preceding incidents die their death.

Then Thaw heard the stories of Evelyn's association with E. R. Thomas. If before there had been the least possibility of a reconciliation, it was killed when the young inmate learned that the tales of the association of the couple were true and not exaggerated in the least.

A. Russell Peabody, acting for Thaw, admitted to a reporter for the BOSTON AMERICAN that Evelyn would demand heavy alimony, but he declined to discuss figures.

He and Daniel O'Reilly held a conference, and at the conclusion went to Matteawan, where they consulted with Thaw.

"We will file our papers to-morrow," said Mr. Peabody. "You may rest assured the case will be fought. Thaw was sane when he married Evelyn Nesbit, and his present condition of mind does not in any manner enter into the case."

Before Thaw received the papers in the action he quoted as having said he would forgive everything and take Evelyn back.

Bases Action on Lunacy.

Following is the complaint in the action for the annulment of the marriage, brought through Daniel O'Reilly for Mrs. Evelyn Nesbit Thaw:

"Evelyn Florence Nesbit Thaw, plaintiff, vs. Harry Kendall Thaw and Mary Copley Thaw, defendants.

"The plaintiff in the above action complains of the defendant and alleges first:

"That on the fourth day of April in the year 1905 in the city of Pittsburg, Pa., Evelyn Florence Nesbit Thaw, then Evelyn Florence Nesbit and Harry Kendall Thaw, the defendant, were married; and

"That at the time of the said marriage of the plaintiff to the defendant the said defendant was a lunatic and of unsound mind and incapable of making a valid contract and incapable of contracting marriage; and,

At Time of Marriage.

"That the cause for the annulment of this marriage is that lunacy of the said Harry Kendall Thaw existed at the time of same marriage; and,

"That Mary Copley Thaw, named in this complaint, is the mother of said defendant, Harry K. Thaw; and,

"That both parties to this action are this time residents of this State; and,

"That there has been no issue of the marriage in said Evelyn Florence Nesbit Thaw and the said Harry Kendall Thaw; therefore,

"The plaintiff prays and asks that the said marriage be annulled on the grounds above set forth.

To Go On Stage Again?

Daniel O'Reilly emphatically denied today that Evelyn is contemplating a return to the stage saying:

"Mrs. Evelyn Thaw has no plans for the immediate future."

The report in circulation along Broadway declares that not only is Mrs. Thaw to star, but that the part she will take has been written for her. It contemplates the "big scene" of the play a representation of accurrences since she, as the heroine, is put through a grilling cross-examination by a lawyer who seeks to discredit her. It was argued this would be the strongest kind of a drawing card on the road, as in some respects it would portray the scenes of the young woman passed through twice at the hands of District Attorney Jerome.

ANNA GOULD FLAGS TRAIN; DELAYS LINER

STEAMER WAITS TO AID HER IN FLIGHT WITH CHILDREN TO AMERICA.

CHERBOURG, France, March 11.—Mme. Anna Gould's automobile, in which she was coming from Paris, supposedly to take the liner Adriatic here for New York, broke down near Lisieux.

Finding that the White Star boat train, from Paris to Cherbourg, was 2 hours and 30 minutes late, Anna Gould had it flagged at Lisieux station, hurried aboard and is hurrying in this direction. Her three children were already passengers on the train.

The Adriatic is awaiting its arrival, and will consequently not sail until 7:30 p. m. instead of 5, the regular hour of its departure.

Prince Helie de Sagan, who is supposed to have arranged to sail on the boat, has not been located.

Mme. Gould states she will cancel sailing if he is aboard her boat.

HUNDREDS IN CHELSEA BREAD LINE

One thousand three hundred loaves of bread were given out by Bakers' Union Local No. 45, in the bread line at Chelsea to-day. The distributing station at No. 103 Arlington street was besieged from an early hour by men, women and children, and many wept tears of joy as the two-pound loaves were parceled out to them.

There were several hundred in line in front of the distributing station an hour before it opened. A corps of white-aproned bakers, acting as clerks, passed the bread out, and to every applicant with a large family, four loaves were given.

Two women, weak and emaciated, told the clerks when they reached the window that they had walked for their supply all the way from Boston Station. They were widows, with families of small children. The boldest, they said, were on the verge of starvation at home. Both of them cried as they stood waiting in the long line.

"I thought we should never get here," said one of them, tearfully, as she edged her way closer to the window. "We got up early, both of us, so that we might get our supply of bread and hurry home with it to the little ones."

A bystander paid the car fares of the two women back to East Boston.

One hundred and fifty requests were received for bread during the morning from families without sufficient clothing to permit them to go after it. Members of the union formed themselves into a visiting committee, and every request was granted, the bakers personally delivering the bread at the houses.

DEMOCRAT CALLS LEAGUE CLEANEST OF ALL PARTIES

ATTACKS BILL DRAWN TO KILL OPPOSITION TO DEMOCRATIC AND REPUBLICAN MACHINES.

ALBANY, N. Y., March 11.—"The Independence League is a cleaner organization than either of the other parties because it can reject candidates who are found objectionable."

This tribute was uttered to-day by Thomas F. Grady, Democratic leader in the Senate, in a speech attacking the Cassidy bill, which is designed to drive out of politics the Independence League and other organizations that oppose the Democratic and Republican machines.

Senator Cassidy, in urging the passage of the bill, asserted it had been drawn in conformity with Governor Hughes' January message.

Senator Grady arose, and, turning on Cassidy, exclaimed:

"It is just such measures as this that led to the incorporation of the Independence League. It is a well known fact that both the Democratic and Republican parties carry on their polls the names of men not identified with them, to be used when occasion requires. The Independence League is a cleaner organization than either of the old parties, because it rejects candidates who are objectionable."

This aroused Senator McCarren to jump up and observe:

"I beg to remind the Senator that members of the Independence League can also enroll with the old parties and participate in their primaries."

Grady, mindful of the trial of McCarren by the State committee for treachery to the regular State nominees in 1906, retorted:

"You don't stop such things under this bill. Why should there not be some way of punishing a member of the State committee who bolts his party ticket?"

"There ought to be some check to poll their freedom," put in Senator Cassidy.

The bill was sent to the Judiciary committee.

Davis was one of the richest men of the West when he died. An attempt was made to break his will and Ingersoll was employed for that purpose. A compromise was effected after one trial, but Ingersoll failed to get his fee.

First motorist—"The man who sold me this car seems to have lost interest in me. He gives me no service at all."

Second motorist—"The man who sold me mine has a deep interest in me, judging from the size of the monthly repair bills he sends me."

Which is your case?

NEITHER, if you own a Winton.

The Winton company makes its profit when it sells you a car.

That profit keeps our interest in you alive as long as you own the car.

We hope you may never have to pay a repair bill, and we make good on that hope by maintaining in Boston our own branch house, manned by experts who are employed to give you skilled advice, suggestions, assistance, service—to the end that your car will run every day in perfect condition.

These men know Winton cars only. And they are required to know them thoroughly and well—from the 1897 single-cylinder phaeton to the 1908 self-starting Six-Teen-Six.

And our reason is plain. By our making your investment profitable to you, you tell your friends.

And sooner or later, tired of excessive repair bills, inattention and annoyance, they come into the Winton fold and find that Winton service is just as splendid as you said it was.

BRISK TRADE ENLIVENS BIG BOSTON AUTO SHOW

BY J. C. KERRISON.

Society and the motor are trumps today.

Boston's blue-blooded aristocracy and the elite of the motor industry are hobnobbing. The former is going into raptures of delight over the fine form, excellent appearance and beautiful dress of the very finest products of the master minds in the mechanical world, not alone of America, but likewise of Continental Europe.

Trade is Improving.

It is a matter of general comment that as the show progresses the character of the trade materially improves. Some large individual sales were made yesterday. Harry Curtis purchased a six-cylinder Berliet, Paul Keith decided to drive a Matheson this year, and Charles Whittemore added a six-cylinder Austin to his stable.

J. W. Maguire, A. P. Underhill, A. N. Robbins, J. W. Bowman, H. L. Kilburne, F. E. Wing, V. A. Charles, J. M. Ilsworth, J. S. Hathaway, Charles E. Fay, F. J. Tyler and many others reported good sales.

What impresses the visiting from other cities—the men who have visited all of the big shows of the year—is the fact that the crowds which visit the show is composed of the real buying public—that portion of which is not only interested in motor vehicles, but which is anxious to purchase cars. Of course, the real bulk of the trade has not yet been done.

Buying for Delivery Purposes.

While the pleasure vehicles appeal immensely to the great majority, the commercial vehicles, of which there are many, have a distinct following—a following which comprises the substantial business man, who is in search of something of value to him in his delivery system. The commercial cars shown vary in horsepower as they do in price.

Another portion of the exhibit which attracts considerable attention is that devoted to the motorcycle, wherein are shown some excellent specimens of motorcycle construction.

In the line of sundries there is much to be commended, and the person who is in search of appointments for his car can spend some money in purchasing many attractive and likewise serviceable and handy fixtures.

Chief among the lamp exhibits is that of Gray & Davis of Amesbury, which, as heretofore, is made most attractive by the manner in which the model tools are shown.

A late arrival last evening was Sales Manager Charles B. Shanks of the Winton Motor Carriage Company, without whose presence a Boston show would never be complete.

Promises to Be a Record Year.

C. C. Hildebrand of the Stevens-Duryea arrived in town this morning and immediately established his headquarters with J. W. Bowman. Mr. Hildebrand said: "The year 1908, despite the fact that it is a Presidential year, will be a record one for the motor industry."

President Hugh Chalmers of the E. R. Thomas-Detroit Company was another prominent maker who reached Boston yesterday.

Manager J. S. Hathaway of the White Company carried off the honors in entertaining yesterday, acting as the host of Governor Hughes and party of New York during their short stay in Boston.

Charles T. Clifton, the treasurer of the George N. Pierce Company, arrived at the show yesterday, direct from the Buffalo factory, to spend a few days with the local Pierce representative, J. W. Meserve. Mr. Clifton stated that the retail sales the Boston show will be a record breaker. He says that on the opening day of the exhibition here five Pierce Great Arrow cars were disposed of.

SOME OF THE THINGS THAT INTEREST SHOW VISITORS

Mrs. Henry Hess, president of the Hess-Bright Manufacturing Company, entertained a number of automobile enthusiasts yesterday afternoon at the Boston show. Mrs. Hess is highly interested in ball-bearing. She proved by figuring the average motor car that Mrs. Hess knows that a considerable portion of the energy of his engine is absorbed in merely making the shafting and transmission turn, and in the chains. Few realize how small a percentage of the entire power generated by the engine is actually delivered to the road wheels, and how important a factor the ball-bearing is in saving this power and reducing the load.

The Hartford Rubber Works Company's display leaves nothing to be desired. The recent disposition of the tremendous profits shown is much regretted by Manager Daniels. One car in this exhibit is that with the so-called sunstone body, which might be termed either a touring car or a four-passenger runabout. Manager R. D. Daniels expects to have the car that made the fast trip from New York to Gravesend, Kan., here today or tomorrow. This car carried a message from General Grant to Lincoln in the commander-in-chief's behalf for the distance that will stand for some time, and this despite the blizzards encountered on the way.

For some reason the two horses that have been used to pull the cars up the nearly 45 per cent. incline into Mechanics building did not show up yesterday morning. There were seven cars to be taken in and the exhibitors were anxious for fear they would not get their machines in before the opening time, when Arthur Adams, manager of the Algonquin Motor Car Company, showed up with his Oldsmobile runabout. He immediately offered to do the trick, and hitching the black and tackle to his car in less time than it took the horses to pull in two cars had pulled the whole seven into the building.

Over forty members of the Engineers' Automobile Association, who are holding their convention this week in Boston, were on hand yesterday to visit the Heinz Klectric Company's plant at Lowell for an inspection of the factory as the guests of J. G. Heinz. They will be taken in cars furnished by members of the Bay State Automobile Association. Among those who will go are: T. J. Fay, president of the association; Henry Hess, treasurer of the association; M. E. Hutchinson, H. L. Fowler, Joseph Tracy, the famous racing man; H. F. Hamblen, H. E. Swetland, A. L. Mowry, H. D. Gray, A. L. Riker, J. O. Heinz, Harold H. Brown, S. S. Baldwin and A. L. Manton.

* * *

Owing to the meeting of automobile engineers in this city there are a large number of mechanical experts from the various factories in attendance. These men went from booth to booth making a critical examination of the cars. They spent most of their time at a few of the exhibits that they had not previously seen at New York, Chicago, or in fact, any other city, for Boston has a number of cars on exhibition that are being shown for the first time this year. Then again many of the members have made a slight change toward improvement in their cars since the New York and Chicago shows.

Two early show visitors were H. L. Bowden and Harry Knight, members of the racing board of the American Automobile Association. Both spent considerable time looking over the numerous race types of runabouts that are on exhibition in nearly every booth. Many of these are of huge horsepower and are so built that they remind one, as Mr. Knight expressed it, of artillery wagons without the horses.

* * *

One of the hits at the show is the little book of registered automobile owners in Massachusetts under the new code and filed with the Massachusetts Highway Commission. This valuable compilation is presented by the BOSTON AMERICAN at its booth to all visitors.

* * *

Don't overlook that show up in Horticultural Hall, where the E. R. Thomas Company holds forth all by itself and requires no ticket of admission. At present there are every type of motor, from the light runabout to a three-ton commercial truck. Yesterday Mr. Blake convinced a Boston doctor that the Jackson runabout was one of the best cars for the money on the road on a wager to carry him from Brookline to Boston on high speed inside the hour. He did it in forty minutes. It is only fair to add that the Brookline man became an owner of a runabout at once.

* * *

One of the most important meetings of the week will be that of the Society of Automobile Engineers, who will hold their annual convention in Boston, beginning today. They made a trip to Lowell in automobiles yesterday, the members of the Bay State Automobile Association acting as escort. The Heinz Klectric Company, by the courtesy of which engineers will attend the show in a body, and the day will be known as "Engineers' Day" at the exhibition. In the evening Mr. Heinz will give a lecture at the Institute of Technology on ignition.

Folks are buying Maxwells because everyone can see for himself more of consistently satisfactory Maxwell Performance than can be found in cars of other makes, even though they cost twice the Maxwell's price.

We want you to determine the real worth of the Premier.

Forget the list price and compare it point for point, and the car as a whole, with any car of American or foreign make of approximately the same size and power, and we are willing to abide by the decision. NEW SENSATIONS IN CHARGES BY BATONYI

IN ANSWER TO DIVORCE SUIT OF WIFE CLAIMS SHE ADMITTED WRONGS TO HIM.

NEW YORK, March 11.—Aurel Batonyi to-day filed in the Supreme Court his answer to the suit for divorce instituted by his wife, who was Mrs. Burke-Roche. In his reply Mr. Batonyi makes charges far more sensational than any that have been forecast.

As the AMERICAN told exclusively last week Batonyi names eleven co-respondents. But drastic as the former's charges are concerning the alleged wrongdoing of his wife, they form only a small part of the allegations he makes.

Batony's chief accusations are directed against Frank J. Sturgis, banker, broker and secretary of the Jockey Club, who lives with his at No. 17 East Fifty-first street. Sturgis is chief co-respondent, but the charges against him embrace an alleged conspiracy for millions.

Allege Plot Involving Millions.

Mr. Sturgis, who, as shown in the court papers, rose from office boy for Frank Work, father of Mrs. Batonyi, to president of the Stock Exchange through Mr. Work's aid, is accused of having secretly and wrongfully secured control of the millions possessed by Frank Work, the alleged father of Mrs. Burke-Roche Batonyi, and having compelled the latter on pain of disinheritance to accept the alternative of being left friendless and penniless on both her children.

Not more astounding are the charges of the conspiracy and its purposes than that part of Batonyi's sworn statement, which says that his wife, who, for two decades, has been a pet of the Four Hundred, has become degraded in character on account of the influence wielded over her by the broker.

Claims Wife Confessed to Him.

This information, according to Batonyi's statement, was obtained through confessions made to him by his wife after their marriage.

With the object in view of keeping Mrs. Batonyi under his control, the former whip declares, Sturgis encouraged her to do many extravagant things and gave her presents of jewelry, carriages, etc. He says that the broker did everything in his power to regain control of her after her marriage.

To this end, it is averred, the couple were first told that if they would leave this country and settle themselves in Europe they would be given an annuity stipend of $24,000. Then, when Mrs. Batonyi had again come once more under the control of the broker, it is alleged, she was offered a much larger settlement on several occasions to leave him entirely.

Reference is made to an agreement whereby it is alleged that if Mrs. Batonyi will give up her husband and remain loyal to the wishes and desires of the broker, "he will give her, or cause to be turned over to her, regardless of the provisions of the will, which may be made for her benefit, and regardless of whether she is disinherited or not, a number of millions of dollars out of her father's estate, which, after her father's death, will come under the control of the aforesaid Sturgis."

Immediately following this, Batonyi charges that his wife is morally weak and strangely susceptible to the influences of Frank K. Sturgis.

The most astounding allegation of the entire document is the sworn statement of Batonyi that after they were married and began to live at Newport his wife confessed that she had been the mother of an illegitimate child. Facts will be laid before a jury in an effort to prove that Frank K. Sturgis was the father.

Batonyi says that the proposals that he and his wife separate were first made in 1905, when they were occupying apartments at the Buckingham Hotel in this city. He avers that Sturgis had been the real object Sturgis had in view, he ordered him to leave the hotel.

LEAGUE MEN SEE VICTORY IN ATTLEBORO

NORTH ATTLEBORO, March 11.—This town is awaiting with interest the rally of the Independence League to be held Friday evening in Pythian Hall, when the principal speaker will be Thomas L. Hisgen, candidate for Governor on the League ticket last year.

Other speakers will be Charles O. Powers, State secretary of the League and State chairman James H. O'Neill of Rhode Island.

Bronson's orchestra has been engaged to give a concert during the evening and an address of welcome will be made by Michael Brohan, chairman of the League Town Committee of this town.

John Devlin and Henry P. Caldwell, the league candidates for selectmen, have been indorsed by the Democrats and will receive the support of a large number of Republicans, both being strong vote getters.

Frank T. Westcott, the League candidate for treasurer to succeed A. T. Parker, who refuses to again be a candidate, has been indorsed by the Republicans and is sure of election. This is the first time Mr. Wescott ever ran for a town office and was "found" by the Independence Leaguers.

SHOE AND LEATHER MEN CONDEMN MERGER PLAN

At the special "Merger" dinner of the New England Shoe and Leather Association, held last night in the Hotel Somerset, it was voted by the 200 members present to adopt the following resolution, presented by E. J. Bliss of the Regal Shoe Company, against the proposed merger of the New York, New Haven & Hartford and Boston & Maine Railroads:

Be it resolved, That the New England Shoe and Leather Association, representing the greatest manufacturing industry in Massachusetts, believes

That owing to our geographical position we must get our raw material, and we must look for our finished product, to many parts of the country, and the lowest possible rate of transportation is essential to the continued growth and prosperity of our industry.

We believe that the system of reasonable competition in transportation which has heretofore been maintained by the two lines of the State, supplemented by the supervision of the Railroad Commissioners, the Governor and the Board of Railroad Commissioners, should be preserved and continued, and that any efforts to create a monopoly in the transportation of merchandise should be vigorously resisted.

We believe that the merger of the Boston & Maine with the New Haven system, and the complete destruction of competition which would result therefrom, would inevitably increase the cost of transportation, and would be detrimental to the best interests of the people of the State, and contrary to the well-established policy of this Commonwealth, and should be made impossible by definite legislative enactment.

Be it therefore resolved, That this association is unalterably opposed to any such consolidation, and the president of this association is hereby instructed to appoint a committee of three to present these views to the legislative hearings bearing on this subject, to request its co-operation with the committees of other trade associations, and to take such further action as may be deemed wise to protect the interests of the industry in this matter.

The resolution was hardly presented and seconded when Andrew G. Webster of the firm of Webster & Company asked that it be made the will of the association that the motion be laid on the table until the report of the Railroad Commissioners was received.

Charles H. Jones, president of the Commonwealth Shoe and Leather Company, claimed that the association had already waited one day after the report of the Railroad Commissioners was due, to hold their banquet, and said:

"Gentlemen, I can tell you right now that the Railroad Commissioners' report will not have anything in it concerning the price of freight."

The question was put by Chairman Charles C. Hoyt, president of the association, and the resolution was voted passed.

Thomas G. Plant said: "I express myself as opposed, utterly opposed to this consolidation known as the merger."

William Whitman, president of the Arlington Mills, was the first speaker of the evening.

Charles H. Jones, president of the Commonwealth Shoe and Leather Company, spoke against the merger, in the absence of Attorney Louis Brandeis, who left Boston Monday to attend to a case in Washington, D. C.

Mr. Jones said: "Consolidations, when they occur, mean an enlargement of securities and an outgrowth of some sort or other. Joseph F. Jackson, former chairman of the Railroad Commissioners, said that improvement of railroads was a matter of administration and not of consolidation.

District Attorney John J. Higgins of Middlesex County also spoke against the merger, and said:

"In 1907, out of twenty-three directors of the New Haven Road only two were from the Massachusetts. If the competition between these two roads is a good thing the question of the merger answers itself."

CELTIC DANCERS PLAN FINE CONCERT

Foley, teacher of the school, will be in charge.

GOTHAM HAS A BABY EVERY 3½ MINUTES A DEATH EVERY 5⅓

NEW YORK, March 11.—One baby born every 3½ minutes every day in the year is the way New York city did her share in 1907 toward the propagation of the human species.

Deaths occurred only at the rate of one in 5 1-3 minutes, and from that it will be seen that the big city would be able to grow with considerable rapidity even if immigration ceased.

Accidents last year resulted in 3,919 deaths there were 284 murders and 711 suicides. There was a marriage every 81-3 minutes.

FALLS DEAD AT DOOR OF HOME

Death is believed to have been caused by a stroke of apoplexy.

PANIC HITS ROOSEVELT'S INVESTMENTS

WASHINGTON, March 11.—Attorney-General Bonaparte is not the only member of the administration who has been hit by the financial depression. President Roosevelt has felt the effect.

The President hasn't lost any money in bank failures, so far as can be ascertained, and he isn't advertising any farms for sale; he hasn't any farms, except the one at Oyster Bay.

The President's money, what there is of it, is invested almost wholly in securities, largely railroad securities. All of these have declined with the rest of the market.

As they were not bought on margin, but as investments, Mr. Roosevelt has not had to sacrifice any of them yet. But every blow of the Big Stick—if that is the force that has been depressing stocks—has driven the President's own holding down a notch.

While there has not yet been any actual decrease in income, it is not expected at the White House that in the present state of the country's business dividends can be kept up to those of prosperous years.

DENIES BEING TURKISH SPY

Declaring that his life has been threatened on account of unjust accusations, that he has been told that he will be "put out of the way," and that he is the victim of an undeserved persecution, J. J. Bosdan of Chelsea, a Greek printer, well known in the Turkish revolutionary movement, indignantly denies any insinuations that he was concerned in the recent alleged betrayal of ten Boston Armenians to the authorities in Constantinople.

At the time of the arrest of these ten Boston Armenians in Turkey, Bosdan gave out a brief statement, saying the arrested men were apparently members of the third Hunchakist faction, or "Reformers," as they are styled by the first two factions.

The next day an interview was given out by Editor D. M. Arsang. It is to this interview that Bosdan takes exceptions. He says that since it appeared he has been constantly threatened. He does not blame the Hunchakist factions, however, so much as disorderly outsiders.

How Working Girls Can Avoid Getting the Business Face

By Ada Patterson.

IT depends upon yourselves, girls, whether you ever get the business face.

It isn't an attractive thing. You see it at its worst, more or less screened by the newspapers behind which men hide when their offices are crowded and the owner of the business face has no thought of relinquishing his seat.

It is pale and drawn and repellant. The mouth is hard. The eyes are cold. There are no merry lines, the record of much laughter, about the eyes, but cor furrows running from nostrils to lips are deep and extend a half-inch or more below the corners of the lips.

Beneath the eyes are deep, pale hollows, the marks of depleted vitality and an unhealthful concentration.

The business face settles low into its owner's collar. It is a pallid thing of deep lines and hard surfaces and forbidding spirit.

Study It in the Cars

In the subway crush, at the theatres, in the parks or the shops, one sees it often—the business face. Pretty girls, looking modestly and wearily into their laps, their minds filled evidently with the one immediate object of reaching the shop, the factory or the office as soon as possible—in these one sees the faint force-beckoning of it. In women who have crossed the border line of the thirties or forties it is pronounced. Having acquired it at that age, it is difficult to displace it. Much better it is that you prevent it.

Healthful concentration is the price of success, but there is an unhealthful concentration that hinders it. When business becomes an old man of the sea; when you cannot sleep because of it; when you cannot eat because of it; when you can enjoy no light hours apart from it; it has become your master and you its slave. Then are engraved the first lines of the business face.

"Don't look that way," I heard a young man say to a young woman in whom it was evident he had a tender interest, "after awhile that expression will become set."

The young woman looked up and smiled, and I saw how pretty was the face that a moment before had seemed hard and unattractive. The smile that is not merely from the lips outward, but from the heart outward, is like the lighting of a torch in a dark place.

Smiles Will Drive It Away

The too rare smile is one of the moving causes of the business face. The smile is not indispensable to business. It may become something of a nuisance during business hours. But there is no reason why it should not be released before and after those hours, for the hard lines of the business face melt before it as a glacier dissolves in the waters of the Gulf Stream.

Ada Patterson says:

"When business becomes an old man of the sea, when you cannot sleep because of it, when you cannot eat because of it, when you can enjoy no light hours apart from it, it has become your master and you its slave. Then are engraved the first lines of the business face."

When at your business task think of nothing but that. But when away from it, if you value the sanitary business of your face, think of something else.

If it is the work bound who acquire the business face. Every one, no matter what his work, should be larger than that work. Every woman should be bigger than her job, yet many a one is so little that she rattles around in it as a dried pea grows restless in a big pod. She should be so much bigger than that work that what she may think much about it, may feel it by many tributaries of nerves, and picture hearing and absorption of the methods of home greater than herself in the management, yet she does not bore others or shrivel herself by talking endlessly of its minor details.

When a woman talks of the petty cares and puny irritations of her profession she has become workbound. She is a bore. She is beginning to detect the first dull thickness of the business face are being daily carved in her visage.

The Morning Walk

To the average woman in the average avocation business assumes drab hues. But she may surround it with the rosy rim of a wholesome life. She may have friends far apart from the business associations that cark her spirit—friends whose "shop talk" is perhaps her reverse.

A visit to the nearest free circulating library may open the wide doors to fresh currents of thought that will wash away the dust of the day; and there is always open on her the morning or evening walk, or both, which shall, by laving her linen brow with ozone and blowing away the cobwebs of the day's thoughts, renew and freshen her for the next day.

The woman who provides for herself such counter irritants, who turns herself resolutely from unwholesome dwelling upon the routine of her work when that routine is for the time ended, never has the business face.

THE BOSTON GIRL

As Pictured by Nell Brinkley

No. 4—The Brooklyn Girl

THIS is the Brooklyn Girl as I see her. Of course, I can count on my one hand's fingers how many I know of her, and that few are the young ones—the very young ones. But a Billy told me other things about her that I didn't know, and putting the two together—this is what I get.

She is a comely, cozy Betty, with a little seriousness down in her wise, thinking eyes. She is not a jay one—the way some folks mean "gay"—but her heart is as gay and young as a jay.

She is as dainty and pretty-faced as any other of the many Bettys in Greater Boston, and she loves all the things that they love; but some day all the little frocks and the curls and fluffs and dash in clothes are simpler in the Brooklyn Betty.

There is no poster look about her—no flare of color and bizarre line to the coats and hats she wears—though she is perfectly in line form and style.

This Betty's head isn't all bubbly, with nothing in it but fluffs and frills and Billies and flirting with them, and just the mirth and gayety of living.

She thinks wise thoughts, and the wisest and finest of them is the one of being somebody that means something in the world.

She has a one high thing she is reaching for, and she works for that thing with all the youth and strength and gayety and confidence that sing in the heart of the young.

She is a home Betty, too, and so many of her can cook wondrous fine things to eat; and sew, too.

And when the night comes, all black and velvety, and the lights come out, like stars all gold and winking, the Brookline Betty—the young one that I know—doesn't pile on fluffs and glitter and hike her away to the playhouse and supper after. Most times she is all tucked up in a big chair with the soft, under the light, and her elbows dug into a book and her hair all mussed over her eyes; with her mind all gone a-dreaming with the wonders of written words, or—oh, joy, for she's a Betty still in school, she's making circles and triangle and quadrilaterals with her "pencil" propped against the lamp.

The Brooklyne Betty is the one of quiet, perfect style, who carries her clothes gracefully, with all the youth of other Bettys in her heart—the Betty who is so fine to know in her own home, and who has a little, serious place in her nature that is striving for a share of honor and usefulness in the world.

Daily Short Story

THE WHITE LADY

By Ernest Kraver

MANY years have passed since the artillery regiment in which I was an officer was sent out on a march through Western Bohemia along the foothills of Boehmerwald. We were garrisoned in Holitzan, and the Kaiser manoeuvres had ended at Kapilta. We marched for many days.

We had to stop over night in the town of Katzenstein, and we officers were quartered in the castle, where we were received with the greatest hospitality.

After dinner the daughter of the house had it upon herself to act as cicerone at the castle, which was very interesting, being a mediaeval building, with its turrets and numerous towers. Katzenstein is far famed as one of the most beautiful castles in Germany, surrounded by a moat with a drawbridge, which is exceedingly well preserved, its oaken planks and beam having defied centuries.

Our beautiful guide took us to the picture gallery, where hung in long rows her ancestors, who had owned the castle for more than 500 years.

We were in the best of spirits, joke and compliments flew thick and fast as the young countess evidently enjoyed our company.

One of us said with an incredulous smile: "And now, countess, please tell us which one of these many beautiful women here is the white lady, for it goes without saying that a castle like Katzenstein must have its white lady."

The Painting

Most assuredly we have a white lady," the countess replied rather sternly. "There is her portrait." She pointed to a painting of an unusually beautiful lady wearing the costume of the period of the Thirty Years' War and resembling in the most striking manner the young lady standing before us.

"And where does she appear? Did you ever see her?"

"In the room which the major surgeon is to occupy to-night. She appears only at night, and is then always seen standing very quietly in an easychair in front of the open fireplace, in which there myself. Just three years ago, a short time before manoeuvres, I had almost dark, and as I had no light I took her to be one of the maids and said: 'Why do you not rise when you hear me coming?' Then she turned her head and I saw for the first and only time the white lady of Katzenstein.

There is no doubt that the young countess was in earnest, and her words acted as a damper on our gayety.

At last our Lieutenant-Colonel, trying to make light of the affair, said to the surgeon: "Well, Major, what would you do if you should come into your sitting room tonight and find the white lady sitting there?"

"Oh, I don't know, but if she looks anything like her portrait here I have an idea I'd rather enjoy my arms around her neck and kiss her."

"Oh, come you would," laughed the Colonel, "and that would be just what she would expect you to do, I'm afraid."

The Countess' face took on a strange expression, and it was evident that she had her doubts as to whether I would save the major to do as I said, but she only shrugged her shoulders without saying anything.

She Appears

The rest of the afternoon we spent playing tennis, feeding the deer in the large park and inspecting the splendid thoroughbreds in the stables. One of us also went alpine shooting.

It was toward the end of September, the days had shortened considerably, and it was growing dark as I, returning from a long walk in the park, went to my room to dress for the evening meal. My room was in the corner of the eastern wing and was found as I entered that I did not have a single match in my pocket.

"Hang it!" I was about to exclaim, when I looked in front of the fireplace and saw a replace a lady dressed in a long, flowing white robe, reaching to her feet. She did not look up and seemed lost in thought, and the expression of her face I could make out even in the faint light, was one of great sadness.

I must admit that my heart began to beat so that I could almost hear it. I knew there were matches on the table near the door. Should I strike one and light a candle? I quickly decided to follow that.

I picked up courage, walked over to the door, and on my hand under the cloth I supposed white lady and found her to be a stuffed figure draped in a sheet.

The next morning at 5 o'clock we started off. I rode behind the regiment through the old gate across the drawbridge, which trembled under the weight of the heavy guns, and as I looked back I thought of the young countess who, awakened by the rumble of the gun carriages, probably was reflecting on the past.

I have nothing in the world so unattractive and unlovely as bad temper. It mars the prettiest face and makes the plain one absolutely repulsive.

With the majority of us, the one thing we have to offer our friends is sweet temper and kindliness.

Some Fly in a Rage

PEOPLE of nervous, irritable organization find it very hard to be always good-natured and even tempered. With every nerve jangling and out of tune it is next to impossible to look gracious.

The only thing to do is shut your teeth hard and control yourself for the moment. If you can't keep back the sharp reply, walk away.

The calm people are more apt to sulk than to fly into a sudden rage. And oh, how exceedingly tiresome the sulks are!

The sulky people are the ones who think that no one appreciates them.

And why should any one care for or seek the society of a person who has nothing to offer but frowns and bad temper?

If you want people to like you, you must make yourself agreeable. Don't get the idea that you will be considered "easy" if you are good tempered. It is better to be "easy" than cranky.

Give the best that is in you to every body, from the office boy to the boss, and from the least important of your friends to the most.

It's Your Own Fault

Of course, you will put yourself out more for those you love than for those you do not, but I am merely speaking of temper. Don't lose your temper or sulk with anyone.

When you think that everybody is down on you it is all your own fault. You are in a disagreeable mood and trying to put the blame on others that is all.

If you are kind to people they will be kind in return.

Half the time when you are in the sulks the person against whom your temper is directed is not even aware of having offended. The cause lies solely in your own imagination.

Good health and beauty are fleeting, but a sunny disposition will brighten your whole life and bring you friends and happiness long after you have turned your face to the setting sun.

Expert Advice on Health and Beauty

WANTS TO GET THIN

DEAR PROFESSOR:

Will you tell me how I can get thin? I want to lose about fifteen pounds. I have such large hips, but otherwise I am not stout. I have not always been as stout as I am now. Will you tell me about the orange diet? Is chewing gum harmful or fattening? I weigh 145 pounds.

HYGIENIC.

AVOID sweets and all fattening foods; drink little water; sleep little and exercise much. For the special reduction of the hips take the bowing exercise, that of touching the floor in front of you without bending the knees. Do this gently at first and only about ten times. Increase until you can lay the palms of your hands on the floor and can take the exercise at least twenty-five times. Eat your orange juice immediately after eating; the first thing in the morning and the last at night being the best times. Then you are uncombined with your breakfast and lunch. The orange diet is simply taking but one meal a day, dinner, and having orange and luncheon nothing but orange juice, plenty of it, and a little dry toast. Also chewing in moderation just after meals is good for some forms of indigestion, but is harmful if carried to excess.

OUTSTANDING EARS

DEAR PROFESSOR:

I have outstanding ears which annoy me very much. What I would like to know is whether or not a specialist could correct them. Would you please advise me what to do?

INTERESTED.

YES, a specialist can correct them with little trouble. Have you tried sleeping with a bandage over them, which draws them tight to the head? This is in many cases beneficial and if faithfully adhered to pretty sure of success.

USE WALNUT DYE

DEAR PROFESSOR:

Will you kindly tell me of a very simple remedy to darken eyelashes? My eyelashes are thick, but so light they can hardly be seen. What I would like to know is whether or not a specialist could correct them. Would you please advise me what to do?

L. W.

THE walnut stain for the hair often mentioned in this column would be admirable, and you can experiment with the strength of the dye on a lock of hair until you get the right shade.

WANTS HAIR GROWER

DEAR PROFESSOR:

Kindly tell me of something to thicken my hair; also something that will make my hair grow, as it is very short.

READER.

I KNOW of nothing so good as the vaseline and cocoanut oil treatment often given in this column. It was repeated but a few days since.

"No Baby To Cheer This Lonesome House"

No baby in the house, I know;
'Tis far too nice and clean,
No tops by careless fingers strewn
Upon the floor are seen.

No finger marks are on the panes,
No scratches on the chairs,
No wooden men set up in rows,
Or marshalled off in pairs.

No little stockings to be darned,
All ragged at the toes;
No piles of mudpies to be done,
Made up of baby clothes.

No little trouble to be soothed,
No little hands to fold;
No grimy fingers to be washed,
No stories to be told.

No tender kisses to be given,
No nicknames "love" and "mouse,"
No merry frolic after tea—
No baby in the house.

Smile, Be Pleasant, Don't Sulk, if You Would Have Friends

By Beatrice Fairfax

DO you have moods? Do you have days when you feel that no one likes you or appreciates what a wonderful person you are; that everyone is against you, and that your lot is almost too hard and self-sacrificing to be borne?

I dare say you do, for most of us indulge in the luxury of self-pity once in a while.

I know of one young woman who occasionally indulges in a perfect orgy of "mood." Fortunately, her common sense finally comes to the rescue and shows her that she is making a goose of herself, and she gets over her tantrum, for that is what it is, very quickly.

ADVICE TO THE LOVELORN

By Beatrice Fairfax

JEALOUSY THE TROUBLE

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I have been keeping company with a young man for the past seven months, during which time we haven't had a single quarrel. Two weeks ago, while our walking alone, I met an old friend of mine, who asked me to go to the theatre with him. Not thinking anything wrong, naturally I went with him that afternoon. That same evening my friend came to see me and asked what I did that afternoon. I told him where I went. When he got real angry at me, saying that I must not marry that man. The next time he came to see me he treated me real coldly and he hasn't been to see me since, but has written two times, scolding me each time. Do you think that I'm not engaged to him and also that I acquitted it all to him? I think that if he really loved me he would not get mad at the one he thinks I made in going to the theatre, it being the first and only time of the kind ever happened. Did I do wrong in going to the theatre, considering that it was merely in friendship? Is my friend doing right in treating me mean to get square? Would you seek a reconciliation or shall I drop him entirely?

MARY.

THE trouble is that he is jealous, but he is acting very foolishly. I do not see that you should seek a reconciliation, as you were honest with him and you say it is the only thing you have done. Let him see that you are not in any hurry to "make up," and probably will come round in very short order.

IF YOU LOVE HIM—NO

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a girl seventeen years old, an orphan, and obliged to work for my living. A young man, twenty-four years of age, and of good prospects, who would like a home and has no one but himself to care for, has been calling on me twice a week for the last six weeks. This young man has asked me to marry him, and as I have to work so hard, and his offers to a nice, comfortable home, do you think I am too young to accept?

ORPHAN.

IN most cases I should say that seventeen was entirely too young. Your case, however, is exceptional. If you love him and he is worthy, you will be much happier married and under the care of a good husband. But do not marry him unless you love him.

THE WOMAN CYNIC SAYS:

IF you would be friendless, be frank.

How easy it is to tell others it's no use to marry.

Every dog has his day, and every woman has her way.

Keep both eyes on an enemy who is anxious to do you a favor.

Sympathy may be all right in its way, but it doesn't weigh much.

Every man has a great weakness who thinks original thoughts.

People can no more help growing old than they can help growing fat.

If ugliness was only skin deep lots of women would try to shed their skins.

Every man feels that a lot of greatness is concealed about his person waiting for the world to discover it.

ANSWER

JUST A WORD TO THE GIRL WHO IS PLAIN

DON'T be discouraged if you are plain of face. Bear this in mind: "I am not pretty; therefore I must make myself as charming and agreeable as possible in order that other people will forget all about my plainness of features." A sweet, contented expression will beautify any face, if the heart is good and true it cannot help but shine out in the face.

The pretty girl is always in danger of being spoiled by flattery and attention, and is apt to place too much reliance on the power of her beauty.

Plenty of fresh air, exercise and care will do wonders for the plain girl.

JUDGE MOVED TO LENIENCY BY WOMAN'S PLEA

"Send Us to Some Prison," She Begged, and Sentence Is Changed.

"Give us the same term of imprisonment, Your Honor, and send us to the same institution; he is the only friend I have on earth," pleaded Mrs. Anna Willson, a comely, young woman of Everett, when she was led along with Frank Giardiello of the same city, before Judge Charles C. Bell in the Middlesex County Superior Criminal Court, East Cambridge, to-day.

Mrs. Wilson and Giardiello were each charged with violations of the law. They had been arrested in the court of Probation Officer Ramsay.

The young woman, her voice breaking with emotion, implored the judge for leniency and she told a sad story.

"My husband married me when I was but fifteen, Your Honor," said the woman. "He drove me to the streets and shamed me and made my life unbearable. This man pleading to Giardiello has been a friend to me in all my troubles. He is the only friend I have on earth. Please make our sentences as light as you can, let them end at the same time, and send us to the same prison. My husband is suing me for divorce in Worcester County. I shall not oppose him, but when it is right I will marry this man."

Judge Bell sentenced Giardiello to one year in the Middlesex House of Correction and the woman to the Woman's Prison at Sherborn. Then her sobs grew louder, George

"Oh, not that; not that!" she wailed. The Judge was visibly moved and he sent both to the House of Correction, the man for one year and the woman for eight months.

Turn Your Face Into Dollars.

Many a Man Has Failed Because His Face Was a Picture of Calamity.

It takes sunshine to produce a rose, a perfect rose. And so man, to be successful, must have sunshine inside. The life which has it not, which has no health and no happiness, is sour, surly, pessimistic, and a failure. The world already has too many vinegar faces that breathe ill-will and strife. The world wants joy, comfort, sunshine, and will cling to the man who has it who radiates gladness and triumph wherever he is and under all circumstances.

Some people have a genius for seeking out the disagreeable, the crooked, the bad and the ugly. These are the destroyers; they travel backward, they herd together, for they love their kind, and the cheerful part of the world will have nothing to do with them.

And why is it that so many peddle disaster knowing at the same time that "at if they do they will be defeated? Some people cannot help it, for pessimism usually comes from bodily disorders, and this could always be prevented. The stomach, for instance, is the most common cause of discontent, sour face, recklessness, disgust and lack of ambition. A bad stomach—there is the secret of many a failure. Anyone can have a good stomach, a strong stomach, a stomach that can take care of anything and everything that is put into it, no matter whether it is a very bad stomach now or not. Then why not have it?

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets do this very thing. One ingredient of these little tablets digests 3,000 grains of food, and no matter how bad is your dyspepsia or indigestion, these tablets will digest everything in your stomach, thoroughly and completely, and better and quicker than a healthy stomach can do the same thing. Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets will cure quickly loss of appetite, brash, irritation, burning sensations, nausea, heartburn, eructations, loss of vim and spirit, bad memory, and dyspepsia and indigestion in their very worst forms.

No other little tablets in the world can do so much. You should carry Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets around with you wherever you go and take them after meals. Then only will you realize what it is to enjoy a meal, and what perfect digestion means. FIREBUG NOW FIGURES IN BAKER MYSTERY

UNEXPLAINED BLAZE IN THE UNDERTAKER'S ROOMS WHILE BODY LAY THERE.

NEW YORK, March 11.—An unknown incendiary now figures in the mystery surrounding the death of Walter Farnsworth Baker, the Boston millionaire and clubman, according to the startling testimony given to an American reporter by Chief Jacob Dunn of the Hackensack police, who was one of the officers assigned to investigate the case.

According to the chief's story, a strange fire broke out in the undertaking rooms of Pell & Co. in Ridgewood, where the body of the young man was taken after having been secretly exhumed and brought on in readiness for the inquest.

Chief Dunn also says that by a strange coincidence the Hurd home was visited by fire while little Natalie Hurd, named in the will of the dead millionaire heir to his estate, was in her last illness.

"There is no doubt that Baker was murdered," he added, "and the inquest should reveal the murderer."

Edward F. Baker, brother of the dead man, said to-day before the grand jury that he was well satisfied with the progress made at the inquest last evening. The jury is open to present several witnesses whose names have not yet appeared, but no testimony will be very important.

In addition to Baker and the unknown witness, four witnesses from Boston are examined to-day. They are Dr. George F. McGrath, medical examiner of Suffolk County, who performed an autopsy on Baker's body; Dr. W. F. Boos, chemical expert; Dr. C. D. Hadley, the Baker family physician, and Dr. Harrington, of the Boston Board of Health.

At the opening of the inquest last night it was plainly brought out that two physicians, who had been called and reached the house after Baker had died in the morning of October 27, had failed to repeat the statements of Mr. and Mrs. Hurd and Mrs. Natalie Young as to the cause of death and had drawn their conclusions therefrom.

Undertaker Ricardo testified that he had knowingly violated the law by embalming the body before it was even cold, after he had been told that it was a coroner's case.

He asserted that he had acted on his own initiative in embalming the body, and declared that he had followed a custom where a death was not reported to him as suspicious.

The Time of Death.

The questions of Prosecutor Koester were pointed to bring out the fact that Baker had died some time before the physician arrived at the Hurd home; that he had died, in fact, before either of the physicians had been summoned.

He failed to establish such a theory from the answers of the physicians, but at the same time they were unable to contradict it.

Edward F. Baker was present at the inquest and suggested some of the questions put to witnesses by Mr. Koester. He will be called as a witness when the inquest is resumed this afternoon and last night promised sensational testimony.

He said, when asked who he called and would testify that his brother had been warned that he would be poisoned.

The grand jury room was crowded when Coroner De Mund began the inquest. Malcolm Morris, representing Mr. and Mrs. Hurd and Mrs. Young, the persons present at the Hurd home at the time of Baker's death; Rodger Ernst, representing Harvard University, which is interested in the estate of Baker; Senator Wakely and other lawyers representing various interests were present.

Doctor's Statement.

Mr. and Mrs. Hurd and Mrs. Young, all of whom are now living in New York and out of the reach of a legal summons by the coroner, were not present. Coroner De Mund said they would be present when wanted.

Dr. G. Howard McFadden, the first physician who saw Baker's body after death, was the first witness called. He was closely questioned by Mr. Koester about the statements of Mr. and Mrs. Hurd and Mrs. Young at the events leading to Baker's death.

He said he was called at his home just before 2 o'clock by the telephone and that Mr. Hurd had asked him to come and see Baker. Dr. McFadden said that he had demurred because of the hour, and had gone back to bed, when he was called again.

"For God's sake, come quickly," was the message I received from Mr. Hurd. "It is a case of life and death."

Baker Dead In Bed.

Dr. McFadden said that he went to the Hurd home and was met at the door by Mr. Hurd. Hurd told him that the bedlevel Baker was dead. He found Mrs. Hurd and Mrs. Young in the house. All were in negligee, as though they had retired and had been hastily aroused.

Baker was lying dead in bed, clothed in a suit of pajamas. There was nothing in the room to indicate that he had been given any medicines or stimulants.

He had inquired about the circumstances of Baker's death, and had been told about the trip to New York and the hurried trip back to the Hurd home in an automobile, and of Baker having complained of being cold.

He said that from what was told him that he concluded Baker had died from heart disease, resulting from bright's disease.

"Did you make any examination of the body?" asked Mr. Koester.

"I did."

"Did you notice any froth on the lips?"

"I did not."

"Did you notice that the tongue was protruding?"

"I did not."

Coroner Not Notified.

"Did you notice that there were dark spots under the skin on the chest as though the blood had coagulated?"

"I did notice indications of mortification. There were slight spots on the chest."

Pursuing this line of questions, Mr. Koester tried to bring out that Baker might have been dead for some time before the arrival of the physician.

Dr. McFadden could not be certain about the time of Baker's death within half an hour before he saw the body.

"I called up Undertaker Ricardo and told him that Baker was dead. When he arrived at the house I told him that it was a coroner's case. I did not notify the coroner. I asked Coroner Lees, when I met him at the Hurd home at noon the next day, if Ricardo had notified him, and he told me that he had not," said Dr. McFadden.

Dr. Charles F. Adams of Bogota, who arrived at the Hurd home some minutes after Dr. McFadden, testified that he had reached his conclusion regarding the death of Baker largely from what Mr. and Mrs. Hurd and Mrs. Young had told him.

William Ricardo, the undertaker, was then called. He testified that he had been called by Dr. McFadden. He was given to understand that Baker had died of Bright's disease, and, as bodies quickly decompose when death results from this disease, he had decided to embalm the body at once.

Knew He Acted Contrary to Law.

He had once been coroner, he said, and knew that it was contrary to the law to embalm a body before the coroner had viewed it, when it was a coroner's case, but he had often done so when there was nothing suspicious about the death, and followed the same rule with regard to Baker.

He began to embalm the body very soon after he reached the Hurd home, about 3 hours after the morning. He had used 3 poisonous embalming fluid, although he knew that the use of poisonous embalming is prohibited by the laws of the State.

$50,000 FIGHT FOR LOST LEG TO CONTINUE

PLYMOUTH, March 11.—Little Elizabeth Agnes Barry, who wants $50,000 for the loss of a leg, will not stop in her endeavor to get that fortune in damages through the taking of her case from a jury by order of the Superior Court, but will carry it to the Supreme Bench. She appeared as a witness in her own behalf, stumping to the witness stand on a wooden leg. She lost a limb through a huge cake of ice falling upon her from on the wagon she lives with her parents, two sisters and a brother on Gold street, Whitman. Her father is a carpenter. In July, 1905, little Elsie and the two other girls asked the driver of an ice wagon for ice, and he told them to help themselves. They sprang aboard the step in the rear of the cart and while it was being driven across the street a 200-pound cake of ice fell upon her. Amputation was the only thing left for the surgeons to do to save her life.

For two days she hovered between life and death, and after it was believed she was out of danger she had to stay in the Massachusetts General Hospital in Boston. Her injury had been a terrible one. When Her injury had been a terrible one. When the ice fell upon her no bones were broken above the ankle, but the sharp edge of the cake had struck the child's leg at the knee and stripped off flesh and sinews, arteries and nerves.

Lawyers say that her suit from a legal point of view hinges on the question whether she was a trespasser or a traveller upon a highway.

CALEDONIAN DOCKS AFTER STORMY TRIP

Three days overdue and after a voyage replete with gales and hurricanes, the Leyland liner Caledonian, from Manchester, Eng., reached port this morning. The hurricanes were encountered as the boat straightened into the Irish Sea from the River Mersey and they continued nearly all the way over.

Henry Saville, a young English cattleman, who claimed he had been in this country nine months and to have returned to England to see his wife, could not convince the immigration officers that his story was correct and he was detained for investigation.

EX-CONGRESSMAN DURBOROW DIES

CHICAGO, March 11.—Former Congressman Allen C. Durborow died early to-day at the Robert Burns Hospital, after a long illness. Mr. Durborow waged a fierce political battle with William Jennings Bryan for a seat in the House. He beat Ex-Senator William M. Mason by ten votes in 1906

Anty Drudge on Washboiler Dangers.

Miss Carrie New—"Isn't it too bad about Mrs. Blank's little boy? He fell in a steaming washboiler and was scalded."

Anty Drudge—"Yes, it is a pity. Why women will boil clothes, when it is not only dangerous but a useless nuisance, I can't see. I must tell Mrs. Blank how much easier and better she can wash her clothes with Fels-Naptha in cool or lukewarm water without boiling."

Have you the once-a-week backache?

Do you know what causes it?

Simply long, continued bending and straightening over a washboard.

But you cannot afford to have a washerwoman or send clothes to a laundry.

What are you going to do?

Do your washing the Fels-Naptha way and Fels-Naptha will loosen the dirt so that a few light rubs will take it out easily.

No boiling needed—only cool or lukewarm water, winter or summer.

Full directions on the red and green wrapper.

GRANITE MEN BACK AT WORK; UNION VICTORY

The granite cutters are all at work again. The polishers resumed their accustomed places at wages which were agreed upon between their representatives and those of the manufacturers and they are all at work in full union shops.

No one could be more pleased with the situation than Vice-President James H. Duncan of the International Granite Cutters' Union is to-day. The men and the manufacturers came to terms of agreement yesterday afternoon after a conference lasting for nearly twenty-four hours. Everyone was at his old position in Quincy to-day except the carpenters.

Vice-President Duncan said to a reporter for the BOSTON AMERICAN:

"The polishers were pleased to have cleared their first agreement with the manufacturers and now all the granite cutters, tool sharpeners and polishers employed in Quincy are at work. I noted that some of the papers declared that the tool sharpeners waived the closed shop when agreeing to other terms of the contract. That is untrue, for the reason that their contract no such words as open, closed or union shop were used, and, moreover, our dealings with the National Granite Manufacturers' Association it is always understood that all their agreements are under union conditions and nothing is needed to emphasize such an understanding in any of the contracts made by the cutters, tool sharpeners or polishers."

Riker-Jaynes Employees

The fourteen Riker-Jaynes Drug Stores in New York, Brooklyn and Boston furnish employment to nearly one thousand people. We believe that we have a body of men and women who, for intelligence, skill, courtesy and honesty, cannot be duplicated in any similar institution. We are as particular about the quality of our employees as we are about the quality of our Drug Store Goods.

If among these hundreds of loyal, industrious men and women there should come by chance one who does not practice the principles of fairness, courtesy, honesty and politeness which we preach, we would consider it a great favor if ourselves and a matter of simple justice to our loyal employees if customers would report such shortcomings to the management. In this way, and only in this way, can we maintain to the fullest extent the integrity of the Riker institution.

Take one Cascaret just as soon as you know that you need it.

Then you won't need a purgative. It is an easy and pleasant way to keep well.

This is the day of the gentle in medicine.
The cathartic pill is old-fashioned. Salts and castor oil belong to grandmother's time.
The modern doctor deals mildly.
Cascarets are effective, yet gentle. They don't irritate or gripe. They don't, like cathartics, waste the digestive fluids.

Cascarets do only what some foods will do, what some fruits will do, what exercise does for the bowels.
Their action is natural, not artificial.
If you live out-doors, exercise a great deal, and avoid rich foods, you don't need them.
Otherwise you do.

The most helpful laxative ever devised is Cascarets.
Then, they are candy tablets, pleasant to take.
Then, they are convenient. The ten-cent box fits the vest pocket or the lady's purse.
That is a vital point.
The time to take a laxative is the minute you suspect that you need it.
Don't wait till you get home; don't wait till night.
One Cascaret, taken promptly, wards off trouble.

Cascarets are candy tablets. They are sold by all druggists, but never in bulk. Be sure to get the genuine, with C C C on every tablet. The price is 50 cents, 25 cents and

THONEY HAS NO GRIEVANCE, BUT WANTS TO REMAIN IN MINOR LEAGUE ON ACCOUNT OF ILL HEALTH

CINCINNATI, O., March 11.—Jack Thoney does not want a portion of that $12,000 purchase money. Jack Thoney does not want a more opulent number in his contract for this year. All Jack Thoney wants is permission to remain in the minor leagues another season to build up his none too strong constitution. The outfielder purchased from Toronto by President John I. Taylor for the Boston Red Sox called on Chairman Herrmann of the National Commission to-day with a request for advice.

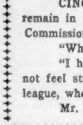
"What is your grievance?" asked Mr. Herrmann, ever ready to do all in his power for the down-trodden-stop-smiling ball player.

"I have no real grievance," replied Thoney. "The salary the Boston club has offered me for the coming season is more than I really expected, and I am not holding out for a portion of the purchase money. The truth is that I do not feel strong enough physically to get into a campaign for a big league job. I have been in rather bad health all Winter, and I feel that I couldn't do myself or the club justice by getting down to hard work at this time. In a minor league, where the strain and gruelling is not so great, I could recover my health and strength while playing. That's what I want to do."

Mr. Herrmann promised to take up the matter with President Taylor, not as chairman of the National Commission, but simply as a friend of the parties concerned. Thoney returned to his home, where he is doing light work.

M'GUIRE TELLS RED SOX INSIDE BASEBALL AND SPEED ARE BIG FACTORS IN GAME

By A. H. C. Mitchell.
SPECIAL TO THE BOSTON AMERICAN.



LITTLE ROCK, Ark., March 11.—Heavy rains throughout the night put Manager McGuire in a quandary as to the state of the ball grounds to-day. The field was sure to be soft, and there was a question whether some of the schemes the manager had up his sleeve could be pulled off. Inside baseball was the feature planned for the Red Sox practice to-day.

The customary game between the Regulars and the Yannigans was called off by McGuire, much to the disappointment of the youngsters, who believe, in the strength of yesterday's showing, that they can put it all over the regulars whenever the two teams meet. But Deacon McGuire decided that a little schooling in the fine points of the game was of more importance than a battle on the diamond, so he had the players out for a special drill. The hit and run game was to be tried in every way and from all points of the compass. All the players were told the signal McGuire had arranged and it was decided that while the batter and base runner tried the trick the others would watch the performance. Everybody was to have a chance to show his ability.

Inside Playing New for the Red Sox.

The Boston club has been going along in a haphazard way for many years. Under Collins the men were taught no inside work. They went to bat and did as they pleased. It was a case of every man for himself. That is one of the reasons the club fell off so badly after winning the championship.

The other clubs followed up-to-date methods and the Boston Americans were lost in the shuffle. This year McGuire intends that every member shall be drilled in modern methods. He has told his men that a team play is absolutely necessary in order to win games these days.

"We have a fast bunch of players down here," he said to them, "but you won't do us any good unless you know how to take advantage of opportunities. I want to get you fellows in shape to win games, even when the hitting is light. We must get every ounce of baseball we know in every game we play."

The Deacon has willing pupils and they promised to follow his instructions carefully. Besides the hit and run feature, the squeeze play was worked into the schedule. Not only were several offensive plays to be drilled into the men, but McGuire told them how he works out some schemes to fill opponents with the idea. "There's many a game that can be won or catching boss runners napping," said the veteran, "and I want my men to know what to do when the right moment comes around."

Working Out a Clever Scheme.

A play that involves the pitcher, catcher, shortstop and centre fielder has already been tried. McGuire sent all his regular pitchers out to the box while McFarland went into catch, Wagner going to short and Dennie Sullivan to centre field.

Then, one after another, the pitchers on a given signal tried to catch an imaginary base runner napping off second. The pitcher was first told how to avoid making a balk, and then he would whirl around and peg the ball to Wagner, who had started for second. At the same time Sullivan would run into back up second base so that the runner could not make third if the ball were thrown wildly by the pitcher.

In one sense there is nothing new in this play, but McGuire drilled it to signals, so that all the men involved knew what it was coming off, and that is something the Boston club never did before. A play to catch a runner napping off third was also practiced, pitcher, catcher, shortstop and third base taking part.

Uncle Cy Pleased With the Deacon.

"I'm mighty glad to see McGuire coaching the boys on these plays," said Cy Young. "They will help wonderfully in championship games and get us out of many a tight hole. Heretofore we have had no system and have suffered in consequence. No club in the American League race has any chance to be up with the leaders unless it can play inside and up-to-date ball. A fast, but weak-hitting club has a show to win plenty of games by using the right methods. Another thing that has pleased me since I joined the squad is the fact that our boys are making noise. You've got to have noise to do any business. The fielders ought to keep busy with their mouths all the time. We have had a bunch of silent infielders for several years. If we stir up some noise it makes us look as though we were trying and also keeps us all on the jump."

The game yesterday was very interesting, but the Yannigan pitchers had the better of the infields for the Regulars and won with something to spare. Uncle Cy started off for the Regulars and shut the Yannigans out in the three innings he pitched. The old fellow used only his fast ball, but had plenty of speed and his head work came in handy in the only place where he was in a hole. This was in the second inning when, with two down and a man on second, he passed Carrigan, the slugger, and easily disposed of Morgan for the third out.

McHale Made a Star Catch.

The only time the old gentleman went to the bat he drove a screamer to centre, McHale, who was in midfield for the Yannigans, came tearing in and speared the ball with one hand, making a hair-raising catch.

It is the very first inning Geisler in right field pulled off a dandy catch. Running up on a Texas Leaguer he threw himself forward, caught the ball two inches from the ground and slid a yard, holding the ball right in his two hands.

Morgan, who started off for the Yannigans, pitched a fine article of ball. He used the "spitter" quite a bit and showed a good lot of speed. The other pitchers did not let themselves out, Manager McGuire having given them orders from McGuire didn't go his limit. "My arm is all right," said Burchell, "but I do not intend to go at full speed until the season opens."

Uncle Cy told the writer that he had made up his mind not to throw a curve ball until April 14. "Last year," said the veteran, "I had a bad arm. I have not had an ache or a pain since I began training. It has been the easiest season for me in all my experience. I am better now than I ever did in the Spring, and if everything goes all right from now on I don't see but what I will have a good year." The Reds will be strengthened by Bescher from Kansas City, and a lively team behind him there will be some games won at the Huntington avenue grounds.

Cicotte, the "knuckle ball" artist, has created the liveliest interest among the other pitchers. They are now all trying the "knuckler" delivery and some of them have succeeded very well, especially Elmer Steele, the Lynn boy. Steele has made a hit with the squad because of his earnest work here. He is in fine shape and if the Boston club can retain him some club will get a good pitcher when time comes for wresting out. The score:

QUILL, BROCKTON BOXER, PUTS DENT IN BONNER'S RECORD AT ARMORY A. A.

"Back to the mines" for Jim Bonner, the Summit Hill masticator of wallops, for Tommy Quill, the star performer with the mitts from Brockton, put a dent in his career when they met at the Armory A. C., before a full capacity crowd of fans, who had trouble in holding their seats because of the heated conflict inside the ring.

Two wildcats couldn't have given a better entertainment if put in one cage. It was just the nature of the boys. They were friendly enough, but were out for the top honors in their business, and neither holds any claims as fancy performers in the use of their mauleys, but are keen when it comes to slamming the punches home, and as both come from the ruggedest stock of human construction they were willing to test their armor plate and let it go at that.

There was no kicking justifiable over the decision of Referee Jack Sheehan when he named Quill the winner, and besides a member of the district attorney's office sat beside the ring and Jack was on his good behavior.

A few, who rooted strongly for the visitor, avowed that a draw would have suited them. This could be accounted for by the way Bonner finished. In the last two rounds he made up his strength with Quill, and is spite of having taken a severe body hammering up to that stage he had the Shoe City boy beading at the knees from the fury of his onslaught.

Bonner Called for Ten Rounds.

The only disappointing feature to the bout was the length of the affair. Bonner came to the Hub understanding that it was a ten-round bout, as he had fought twice here at that distance, and he refused to consider any additional space. Therefore it had to be for ten sessions, and there was sufficient action to make it enjoyable, but a couple of more rounds would have settled who could take the gaff under the strenuous conditions.

It was the general impression that Bonner lost a lot of his stamina in the third round, when Quill scored a clean knock-down and the sturdy Quaker took the full count. From that instant up to the ninth round Quill was in front by a margin, and nothing short of a knockout could have won the award for Bonner.

The way both boys handed out the hard thumps started the feeling that the bout could not go the full route, as the snaps to the jaw came often and the mixups were thick. Tommy Quill who shoke all the cutting up game at short quarters, and his strong asset of fighting was too much for Bonner, who made a brave attempt to swap with him, but was willing to tie up in the hot exchanges.

It was Quill forcing throughout, with his body rushes in full display, and Bonner playing cautious after he once contacted with the point of the jaw.

From the third to the ninth round Quill kept stepping in with terrific left counters over the heart, being obliged to corner Bonner before he could get him in position to let fly.

Bonner Broke Ground.

Occasionally Bonner would get aggressive and take a step and a swaggine, but he was more contented to retreat around the ring, using his left to keep Quill at a safe distance and prevent the Brocktonite from closing in on him. Such eagerness to land on his foe was never given as evidence for the club members to enjoy as Quill exhibited. Whenever Bonner managed to squeeze home a telling punch Tommy sailed in all the harder and swayed the score his way.

The whirlwind finish of the miner was entirely unlooked for, as he appeared to be losing steam gradually, but that he is a dangerous customer on the fistic mat at any stage of the game never impressed a gathering of sports more than his sensational work in the closing rounds.

He got a bunch of speed from somewhere and proceeded to let it loose, and found that he could land his left hook, which was his most effective drop, by bunned it against Tommy's head, loaded with heavy shot, and it disconcerted the suburban boy not a little, as there was a loss of heft behind it, and were pounding away till separated by their seconds.

There was no quarter asked by either when the final round was on, and it was a case who could work the faster in swinging the mitts. There was no attempt to slow anything but both crowded each other to the limit and slashed away like a couple of battering rams trying to splinter the other.

Quill Got It in Last Round.

Quill showed signs of the bombardment, as his knees crumbled a bit, but in an instant he was in the midst of the slamming turmoil and pushing his own.

Quill was a strong favorite at odds of 5 to 4 before the opening, and when he got an early lead in the betting even better in his favor. He had at least ten rounds advantage on Bonner, a fighter who did not let the difference bother him any. Once Quill announced his finish by a hitting low, but Bonner only winced and kept on.

His own clean boxing in spite of the ride of battle earned him plenty of praise, which he deserved.

George Lee, the fast Cambridge banjam and holder of championship medals, was found a tough customer to nip when he faced Young Limerick of Haverhill, who put an even break at the end of eight rounds.

Noah Perry of Boston was paired with Young Donohue of Lawrence, and won by a knockout in the fifth round. The bout which preceded it was so full of quality that the boys' awkward style of milling did not meet with general approval at first, but they soon got warmed up.

STARS IN MAIN BOUT TO-NIGHT AT ROANOKE

It should be a great bout over at the Roanoke Athletic Club to-night, when those two fast masters of the fistic game, Terry Temple and Sam Langford have their mix-up.

Temple is the one man who has always been able to bother Langford in the past. With to-night's go limited to the eight-round distance it would appear that Temple had a little the better of the bargain at the start, and if he displays the same form that he did against Jim Barry a few weeks ago, Mr. Langford will need his "look out" glasses.

Temple will not have any the worst of it in the weight, as he did when he fought the big Chicago slugger.

This fact, together with the possibility of his great hitting powers being brought into action quicker in an eight-round contest, is what makes the mill to-night appear so interesting.

Both are fast hammer and it probable will be before it is over or a groggy, many of the wise fans will miss their guess.

R. C. CROSBY BRINGS MISS RIGGIN FOR SPEEDWAY

The cat is out of the bag. For the past couple of weeks the members of the fast-talking Driving Club have been in excitement concerning the ownership of a pacer that was said to have so much speed the championship of Franklin Field Speedway for the coming season was practically settled. All sorts of rumors were in the air, but which of the members had purchased the crack at Linn. In the big Fall meeting, got second money to Little Rube, 2:12¾, and again in the same meeting was in the middle of a field of twelve horses, when the time was 2:08¾.

Say Mare is Perfect.

Those who know the mare say that she is perfect in every way, and that her extreme speed is attested by having stepped the last half of a 2:10 mile over a two-lapped track in 1:03, while on a mile course she paced the four furlongs in 1:01. Owners of free-for-all pacers will certainly have to get a move on when this piece of horseflesh strikes the local quarter-mile speedway.

Another in the Dorchesters to buy speed is A. A. Johnson, and in his case, too, the purchase was completed over the bald mile tracks in Ohio. It is a trotting mare by Direct Hal, 2:04 D., 2:19¼. She is reported to have a wonderful lick of speed, and the ability of reeling out a long race in her favor. Mr. Johnson has sold his fast favorite Bee, the prize winner of last season at Franklin Field speedway, to a Mr. Brown of Revere, Mass.

A. H. Keeler has just bought the trotting mare, Miss Wilkes. She has the record that was trotted last year by Frank Gates at Combination Park, and could show close to 2:20.

A four-year-old green pacer, by Woodford, 2:08, out of the dam of Manila Boy, 2:18½, has been bought by R. C. Richardson. He is headed for the speedway matinees.

Joseph N. Terry has a new pacer that is a wonder. His speed was discovered by the formed owner, being in a hurry to get out of a sudden shower, and hitting the gelding a crack with the whip he displayed so much hurry that the man's wife in the buggy just pleaded for him to take the gelding back to a slower gait. Mr. Terry is thinking of naming his find "Ben Johnson" after his favorite rube comedian and lost his graduation next year.

M'CAULEY WAS THE STAR.

The Institutes' second basketball team of Roxbury defeated the Montrose's second team of Dorchester by a score of 42 to 15 at the Vine Street Hall. The features of the game were the sensational playing of Joe McAuley, the last little forward of the Roxbury Centrals, who recently won the 120-pound championship, and Gill, who is a new player, while Welchlin played a good game for the Montroses. McCauley and Gill will play for the Institutes the rest of the season.

VALUABLE BULLDOG DEAD.

NEW YORK, March 10.—Heath Baronet, a $5,000 bulldog that had been a star in the family of George J. Gould was poisoned to-day near the Gould home, at Lakewood, N. J., and died to-night. It is suspected that the dog was poisoned by design.

"H" FOR BASKETBALL MEN.

The basketball "H's" will go to the following men: C. Alley, F. Brooks, E. S. Allen, E. S. Currie, S. H. Brown, G. G. Browne, W. F. Scrubner and E. Fish. Only two men, Alley and Wyman, will be lost by graduation next year.

CHAMP DANIELS HERE TO-NIGHT

The Brookline Swimming Club has made a record in previous years for top notch aquatic sports and from the list of events and entries the meet which will be held to-night will excel all others. Besides the Harvard-Yale dual meet there is a list of open events in which the best swimmers from all over the country are entered. The feature of the evening will be the fifty-yard invitation race between Lester B. Rich of the B. S. C. and Champion Charles "Daddy" Daniels of the A. A. McCormack of the B. S. C. will be heard from in the plunge for distance and will have a chance to demonstrate his ability to compete in the Olympic games.

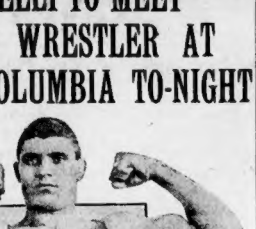
JOHN PERELLI TO MEET FRENCH WRESTLER AT THE COLUMBIA TO-NIGHT



PERELLI, THE ITALIAN MAT ARTIST.

Raymond Caseaux, the big Frenchman, whose sensational mat performance at the Columbia a few weeks ago will not easily be forgotten by those who saw him make mince meat of Ronnaoff, the Russian heavyweight, will face a far different problem at the same theatre to-night when he stacks up against John Perelli, the Italian whirlwind, whose prowess as a wrestler has made him one of the most popular grapplers on the country.

Perelli knows what he is up against to-night for he was one of the onlookers when Caseaux wrestled here a few weeks ago, and thinks that the Frenchman was nothing up his sleeve that he cannot get away with and thinks he will make the Gascon wince when he gets one of his famous toe holds on him.

The Frenchman's style of wrestling is not quite as finished as that of Perelli, he being exceedingly slow to take advantage of numerous openings, but has immense frame and great strength will probably be more than Perelli can overcome. The Italian is a master of defensive work, as his bouts with Landin and Yanker Rogers have proved, and Boston sporting fans think the gritty Italian will make the French bowl longer and longer than did Ronnaoff, showing that the bout he had on that floor was chased off the mat by the irate Frenchman.

Perelli glories in a rough bout, and if Caseaux tries any of his rough-shod on the Italian there will be plenty of excitement at the Columbia, for the Italian is one of the best-liked boys on the mat circuit, showing that the bout has attracted more than ordinary attention.

THE BOSTON AMERICAN

80 AND 82 SUMMER ST., BOSTON, MARCH 11, 1908

For the Young Men's Christian Association Advertising Class

This Editorial Is Written at the Request of the Brooklyn Y. M. C. A. It May Interest Others

Copyright, 1908, by American-Journal-Examiner

Young men of energy may profitably consider the possibilty of making themselves useful and prosperous by going into advertising.

The field is a great one, constantly increasing in opportunity.

Advertising is to industry what the electric light bulb is to the steam engine and the dynamo in the electric light power house.

The steam engine and the dynamo do the work, but you know what they do only by the light as shown in the electric bulb.

The factories in America do wonderful work, but the people know of it only as they see results stated and energy displayed in the electric light of advertising.

Advertising is part of the most important work in the world. That work to-day is DISTRIBUTION.

You know that man's labor, broadly speaking, consists of production or manufacture AND DISTRIBUTION. Production without distribution would be valueless. Advertising, with its distributing power, does for industry what the clouds and sunshine, drawing up the water, do for the earth in scattering the oceans' great waters.

There is plenty of water in the oceans, seas and lakes, and yet we have arid deserts, THROUGH LACK OF DISTRIBUTION. Until the sun's power raises up the water, until the wind blows the clouds and that water falls on the fields that need it, THE WATER IN THE OCEANS IS USELESS TO THE EARTH.

It is the DISTRIBUTION of water over the earth that makes the earth fertile and makes the oceans useful. And the greatest work that our Government is doing now is the wonderful work of irrigation or water distribution in the West.

In industry, advertising is the great distributor, doing the work of sun, clouds, wind and rain.

Advertising is the short road to success. In the old days a man had his little shop, and he put the shop where many people would pass and see his wares. We have more crowded streets to-day, better shops. But the location of the shop is relatively unimportant. The number of people that pass by is nothing.

A business man of enterprise who understands advertising can talk every day to millions upon millions of people, to enormous crowds that could not possibly go through any street in any city. And he can draw to his particular stores those to whom he has the intelligence to appeal.

A man who merely starts out to make money, anxious merely to turn his wit or energy into cash, will never do much. There is something in a man that makes it impossible for him to do well any work of which he is not proud.

The man who succeeds in advertising has a right to be proud of his business. He is the man who puts THE DISRITBUTING TOUCH upon the work of the mechanic, the miner, the farmer, the business man.

Advertising not only distributes goods; it improves the quality of goods.

No amount of advertising will last or be profitable unless there is actual value behind it. And once a man has invested his money—millions of dollars sometimes—in advertising, HE IS BOUND TO KEEP UP THE QUALITY OF HIS GOODS AND HIS SERVICE TO THE PUBLIC AS A MATTER OF SELF-INTEREST.

If a man manufactures a trashy, unadvertised article, puts a flashy label on it, sells what he can, deceives the public and is finally found out, he can simply turn to something else. Or if he makes a good article at first, and then makes it bad and swindles the public for a short while, he can go into something else. He has lost nothing.

But the man who advertises on a big scale INVESTS HIS MONEY IN A PUBLIC REPUTATION, JUST THE SAME AS HE WOULD INVEST IN REAL ESTATE OR MACHINERY.

When a man has put millions into machinery or factories, he would not pull down or destroy that plant. In the same way, when a man has put his money into a reputation acquired by truthful, intelligent advertising, he has built up a name, AN ACTUAL PLANT OF VALUE, AND HE WOULD NO MORE DESTROY THAT BY DECEIVING THE PUBLIC THAN HE WOULD DESTROY A FACTORY, OR A MILL, OR A STEAMSHIP.

Public confidence is one of the greatest elements of business success. Before you can get the confidence of the people, the people must know about you and have reason to trust you. Advertising is the SHORT ROAD TO CONFIDENCE. You tell millions of people what you have to say. You endeavor to live up to your statements in the goods that you sell.

You earn the people's confidence, having invested your capital in a short cut to the public notice. And you keep that confidence by good service.

The man who is engaged in distributing, through advertising, the products of a great firm, of an honest firm—who helps to sell high-class food, or soap, or cloth, or medicine, or drink, or shoes, or hats and to crowd out inferior articles—is actually rendering a service to American industry and to the American people.

And remember that advertising is perhaps the most difficult part of the industrial work of the world. To begin with, IT IS THE NEW THING. And what is new is difficult, as we are not used to it, and have no old, tried paths to follow.

[This will be continued another day. Advertising is a big and rather a dry subject.]

Little Editorials from the People

FOR CLERKS IN SMALL STORES

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

Being of the craft your talks to salespeople meets with a cordial response. Keep it up and those who read and profit will some day thank you for the good service rendered. Thus far your talks seem to apply to large stores only, where ample space is allowed to display goods. Give a talk to the clerks in the small stores, where space is limited and display of goods meagre. Tell those clerks how they may increase their sales. Point out how and wherein their chance to rise must come, not forgetting they have no "aisle man" to note their work.

Impress it on the clerks—rub it in hard—that quick service is what every customer wants. Give them attentive service and the secret of salesmanship is mastered.

One of the factors which tends to retard salespeople's growth in, say, department stores, is the fact that the manager of the department omits to drill his force into the specialties of the goods on the counter. Say the counter carries a dozen different brands of perfume. How many of the clerks will be able to point out to the customer wherein they differ. About all they know is the label on the bottle and the price. Yet six of the brands may be blends of carrots and lilacs, while the other six may contain the essence of the Alsatian hills. Managers, drill your clerks in these details and your store can sell anything that rises on the counters.

The average customer knows what he wants when he reaches the counter. Serve him quick. But don't let that end it. Call his attention to something, no matter what, let him see you are there to sell goods. He may not buy, but he reflects that that clerk is on to his there Job. That's it. Get on to your job. And you will be on to it with heart and brain if you give polite attention and quick service.

Editor Boston American,

Dear Sir:—At the last meeting of Taunton Central Labor Union the following resolutions were adopted:

"Whereas, the Newsboys' Protective Union of Boston and the Boston C. L. U. have attempted a boycott of the Boston American, brought about, as we believe, for political purposes, and

"Whereas, the Boston American is a strictly union product, and has always taken an active part in fighting the battle of organized labor as a whole, therefore, be it

"Resolved, That we condemn the action of the Newsboys, inasmuch as we believe that the employer has a perfect right to set his own price on the product he offers for sale, and that the union man or organized labor as a whole has no right to dictate the price set upon such product, and, further, that we believe the Newsboys are so trying to do; and be it further

"Resolved, That we affirm our appreciation of the stand taken by the Boston American in doing what it can to alleviate the condition of the wage earner, and wish to extend our heartfelt thanks to the management of that paper for so doing.

"Resolved, That these resolutions be sent to the Boston American and inscribed on our records." Sincerely yours

James H. Farrell, Secretary.

[Almost every day brings to the AMERICAN office resolutions, adopted by some labor union, similar to those printed above, or a letter from some union leader expressing similar sentiments. We take pleasure in printing some of these letters and resolutions because they show that the AMERICAN was RIGHT in trusting to the common sense and fairness of union men as a whole.]

Crucifying Their Friends

(From the New Hampshire Trades Unionist)

THE Boston Central Labor Union is coming in for a good deal of unfavorable criticism from labor men in this vicinity over its hasty action in condemning the BOSTON AMERICAN for raising the price of its finished union product to the newsboys.

If there is one paper or collection of papers which deserve the good will of labor men it is the BOSTON AMERICAN and the other papers controlled by Mr. Hearst. While some labor men forget what has been done for them, the great majority remember the many issues raised and carried to a successful conclusion through the medium of agitation by Hearst's newspapers. The poor of New York don't forget him. The newspaper employes of San Francisco don't forget his action in being the first to raise wages after the earthquake, when living was high, and we might go on and enumerate other acts which live in the hearts of those members of organized labor who are standing by the BOSTON AMERICAN in the present and altogether unjustifiable trouble made by the newsboys, and abetted by a clique of the Boston Central Labor Union.

And these consistent labor men regret the action of the Boston Central Labor Body, which sprung the unfair action, and which action is not indorsed by the majority of the union men in Boston or elsewhere.

Surely it is time to call a halt when a portion of organized labor has power to crucify its friends.

Is it any wonder that many people who do not know the good that is accomplished by organized labor, but who hear about the ingratitude of some leaders, hesitate to join the movement. Organized labor cannot be too careful as to the selection of men for leaders. The movement wants men free from political taint and strong enough to resist the temptation to betray the trust reposed in them by taking any action tending to cripple the movement in the interest of any body or clique.—Providence Union Worker Magazine.

The above article is pretty strong language, but those who have lived before us have said: "When a man takes his money and spends it trying to benefit people who are here on earth, he is looked upon as being foolish by the wealthy, and as being a soft mark by those who are benefited thereby."

We can't blame capitalists for having it in for Mr. Hearst's papers, as he, by keeping up the highest standard of wages, has compelled thousands of employers to keep the pace or drop out, but when it comes to workingmen trying to wreak vengeance on him it looks bad to those who might possibly be contemplating making large expenditures of money in improvements so that workmen might receive a little of the benefit.—New Hampshire Trades Unionist.

ADVICE TO NEWSBOYS

From the Lawrence Journal

Here's a little friendly advice to the Lawrence newsboys. Do not permit the agents of jealous rivals to induce you to "strike" the Boston American, for by doing so you would "strike" a blow at your best interests. The Journal can assure you that not only is the Boston American the greatest friend of organized labor in this State, but a pioneer in that direction; while its popularity in this city is proven by its sales, which are three to one over any other Boston paper coming here. "Nuff sed."
